Robert Henderson, the lad under sentence of death for murder at Peterboro, will undergo a mental examination to establish the question of his sanity. This step has been ordered by the justice department.

Robert Long, aged fifteen years, was probably fatally injured at Lingham's brick yard, Belleville, Ont. He got his head caught in the parts of sand and clay mixer he was operating, his skull being fractured. Doctors say he will die.

Two firemen were killed, twenty-six others injured, two of whom are in a critical condition, and at least forty were imperilled and had to flee for their lives at a fire in the five-story free storage, at Nos. 110 and 116, Washington street, New York.

Manager J. Orr, of the Canadian National Exhibition, has received a letter from Col. Wilson of the 3rd Regiment N. G. N. Y., with headquarters in Rochester, stating that the regiment is coming to the Toronto exhibition this year, twelve companies strong and to remain a week.

Cochrane, at the junction of the T. & N. O. and National Transcontinental Railways, 180 miles north of Toronto, emerges at one stroke from an inarticulate wilderness into a town with two weekly newspapers. The Northland and The Northern Sun. Each is newsy and edited with care, and the two, though under separate managements, should be a force in the development of the James Bay slope, upon which so much depends for the welfare of this Province.

Arrangements are now being made for the Eleventh Canadian Conference of Charities and Correction, which will be held in Guelph, June 22nd to 24th. ### TOWN COUNCIL.

Council Chamber,
June 6th, 1910.

Council met in regular session on Monday evening, Mayor T. W. Simpson presiding.

Present—Reeve Alexander and Councillors Meng, Osborne, Waller, Kimmerly, Steacy.

The minutes of the last regular and adjourned sessions were read and confirmed.

A communication was read from Hon. Wm. Pugsley, Ottawa, stating that instructions had been given for the wiring of the post office tower for the illuminating of the town clock. Fyled.

A communication was read from Mrs. F. C. Johnston, recording secretary of the W. C. T. U., asking that the mayor call a public meeting of the women of Napanee for the purpose of making arrangements for the looking after the home for friendless people, recently donated to the town by the late R. J. Wright.

On motion of Councillors Waller and Osborne, the clerk was instructed to answer the communication and suggest to the W. C. T. U. that a committee wait upon the council at the regular meeting and more clearly state their desire as per their communication.

A communication was read from Ira Jaynes asking to be appointed pound-keeper, provided the council purpose establishing a pound. Fyled.

In response to the advertisement asking for tenders for the remnants of the buildings, recently occupied by C. A. Anderson, and which were nearly all destroyed by fire, there were two tenders. Anson Denison offered $16 and Geo. Fitzpatrick offered $5. Tenders not accepted.

A largely signed petition from the citizens of Clarksburg asked that the council have a fire alarm box placed in that locality.

Referred to the Fire Water and Light Committee to investigate and report.

Mr. Geo. A. Thompson and other residents on Bridge street, between Centre and Robert streets, petitioned the council to have the road in that vicinity repaired and put in a safe condition. The petitioners complained that the road is now in a worse condition than it ever was and particularly so since the Waterworks Company laid down their new main on the south side of the street.

On motion of Coun. Waller and Reeve Alexander, the clerk was instructed to notify the Waterworks Co. to have the street placed in the condition they found it. Also that the further repairing of the street be referred to the Streets Committee to investigate and report.

Mr. Walter Exley, sr., addressed the council in reference to a drain he was constructing on Bridge street. Where this drain intersected the town drain he found the town drain stopped up, and asked that the Streets Committee have the matter attended to. Mr. Exley was given to understand that his request would be attended to.

The Streets Committee asked for and was granted further time to report on the petition of the Bay of Quinte Ry. for a side walk on Ann street. The committee also reported that the granolithic walk on the south side of Dundas street, between Centre and Robert streets was being constructed.

It took the St. Catharines post office just a little more than twenty-two years and three months to deliver a postcard addressed to John H. Broderick, the well-known fruit grower. On February 18th, 1888, the Erie Preserving company sent postcards to various fruit growers announcing that they were making contracts for the "present season" 1888. One of the cards was sent to Mr. Broderick. Unfortunately, it slipped into some crevice in the post office. On Tuesday, while the boxes in the post office were being removed to make way for new ones, the card was found. It was of the old style, and was brown with age. A clerk stamped it, and put it into Mr. Broderick's box. Thus it is stamped February 18th, 1888, and May 31st, 1910, and Mr. Broderick considers it quite a curiosity.

Referred back to the treasurer for correction. The mistake complained of was that the appropriation for the Market and Police Committee should appear $50 instead of $40.

Coun. Waller called the attention of the council to the state of affairs existing at the station. It appears that the Grand Trunk Railway and the Bay of Quinte Railway corporations are at logger-heads, and in consequence the Bay of Quinte Ry. have been instructed to remove all their tracks from Grand Trunk property.

The Bay of Quinte Ry. are building their freight shed and station west of Centre street, and this means that a gap of over a block will be left between the Bay of Quinte and Grand Trunk stations, which will be a great inconvenience to the travelling public and a detriment to the town of Napanee. He suggested that this state of affairs be called to the attention of the Board of Railway Commissioners of Canada.

On motion of Councillors Waller and Osborne the clerk was instructed to write the Board of Railway Commissioners of Canada setting forth the existing state of affairs at the Napanee station.

On motion of Councillors Waller and Meng the Fire Water and Light Committee were instructed to have an arc lamp placed at the corner of Dundas and Robert streets.

On motion of Councillors Steacy and Meng the Streets Committee was instructed to have the roadway on the market square put in good repair.

Mr. John Chatterton appeared before the council and asked that the cement walk in front of the entrance to his livery stable be taken up and a regular cement crossing put in.

The Streets Committee were instructed to have the improvement asked for made.

THE NEW PRESIDENT.

The Rev. Mr. Emsley, the newly elected President of the Bay of Quinte Conference, was born in the town of Barnsley, in the West Riding of Yorkshire, his father, the late Joseph Emsley, Esq., being the proprietor of the Flockten Main Colliery, lying contiguous to the town.

Mr. Emsley was educated in the Barnsley Grammar School, and in London—his first appointment in the Toronto Conference, being in the town in which he has just now been elected to the Presidency, his Chairman being the Rev. Wm. Briggs who was then stationed in Belleville. With that Conference he remained identified until the consummation of the union of the various Methodist Churches in 1884 when the arrangement brought him into the Bay of Quinte Conference limits, being a member of the first Stationing Committee of the new Conference.

The pastor of the Western Methodist Church, in Napanee, Mr. Emsley has just returned from Conference to commence the tenth year of his active ministry in that town. Mr. Emsley can hardly be taken as a good representative of the itinerant system as he has spent 23 years of his ministry in the three countries, Montreal, Brandon, and Napanee and has not completed his term in the last named place as yet.

Mr. Emsley obtained the highest vote of the Conference as a member of the honoral Conference delegation to Victoria in August next.

The Rev. M. E. Sexsmith, B. A. L. B. was elected Secretary of the Bay of Quinte Conference, and was born in the township of Richmond. He is the son of J. B. Sexsmith, K. C. Mr. Sexsmith is a graduate in Art and in Law and brings to the secretarial office a well trained mind and the benefits of a good training in this department of service, he having been engaged in some similar service for the Conference for the past three years. Mr. Sexsmith was ordained in the year 1874 in the town of Peterboro. He is now stationed in Newburgh and has had a successful ministry.

Mr. John Madill was appointed President of the Layman's Association of the Bay of Quinte Conference for the ensuing year.

The Napanee District was very much in evidence at the Conference in Trenton providing both President and Secretary, also the President of the Lay Association, sending Messrs. Madole and Bogart to Victoria as members of General Conference. Mr. W. T. Gibbard being appointed one of the Conference Special Committee, a Committee consisting of the Chairmen of Districts, and five laymen appointed to co-operate with them. Rev. Sexsmith and McGill were elected as alternatives in case of the inability of some member of the General Conference delegation to attend.

The end that has been feared for many weeks came at 3:20 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, and peacefully, as though the body, tired out with the long fight, willingly relinquished its claim, the soul of Goldwin Smith passed into the beyond.

Although the physician who was in attendance upon the aged scholar had been hourly expecting his death during the past few days, the news of the sad event came as a shock to the world-wide circle of those who knew and loved him. When four months

CAUSE OF KING'S DEATH

AN OFFICIAL RECORD OF HIS LAST ILLNESS.

Medical Journal Declares That Edward VII. Died a Martyr to Duty.

The authoritative medical history of King Edward's illness and death, contained in the British Medical Journal, is as follows:

"King Edward VII. may be said, with perfect truth, to have died a martyr to his sense of duty as a sovereign. Throughout his reign he has insisted on performing his public duties without regard to his personal convenience. It was only within a day or two of his death that he could be prevailed upon to keep within doors, and even in the last throes of the distressing and dangerous complaint which was so quickly to cut short his valuable life he refused to take to his bed until his flagging powers could no longer be spurred into activity by his resolute will.

"From a medical point of view the case was perfectly simple, and the stopping of the machinery of life was due to causes about which there is nothing doubtful or mysterious. We think it necessary to point out this since the appearance on the bulletins of a leading laryngologist gave rise to a revival of unfounded rumors which were current even before the deceased monarch came to the throne. Professor St. Clair Thomson had, however, attended him on several occasions during the last 18 months. Before that time Sir Felix Semon had often been called on to advise the King about his throat. It may be added that more than 20 years ago he had been seen by the late Sir Morell Mackenzie.

SMOKER'S HEART.

"For years the King has suffered from emphysema and a tendency to more or less acute bronchitis, with the usual symptoms of distressing and ineffective cough and difficulty in breathing. There was crepitation at the base of both lungs, indicating a chronic impediment to the free passage of air in the smaller bronchial tubes. He was subject to attacks of laryngitis, producing a slight spasm of the vocal chords, but except for some inflammatory thickening at the hinder part of the glottis and chronic catarrh of the throat there was, we are in a position to state, no trace of disease in the upper air passages.

"The King, in short, had what is known as a 'smoker's throat,' and this and the congestion and thickening due to this cause, combined with the loss of elasticity in the lungs, made it increasingly difficult for him to clear his chest. The strain thrown upon the heart by obstruction to the passage of blood through the lungs caused by the collection of secretions in the bronchial tubes had its natural sequel in dilation of the right ventricle, and the actual cause of death was heart failure due to the increasing difficulty in the pulmonary circulation.

"It was, in short, a case of a type seen every day in thousands of el-cloudy skies and the cold winds and showers of a treacherous English spring. The result might almost have been foretold. Though the end came with startling suddenness to his people, it was clear to those about him that the end was imminent before any whisper of alarm had found its way outside the palace.

"The first bulletin issued revealed the real nature of the situation to those who could read between the lines. During the last night the state of the heart made the august patient very restless, but the next day he was able to transact business for a short time. Gradually he became unconscious, reviving once or twice sufficiently to recognize the Queen and some of the others about him, but the unconsciousness deepened into coma, and the royal sufferer passed away so quietly that his life seemed to cease upon the midnight with no pain."

FAMOUS MODEL-WORKER.

He Constructed in Miniature the Whole of London.

The leading maker of models in England is John B. Thorp, and his toyland of a workshop is in Gray's Inn road, says a writer in the Strand Magazine. Lest you conceive the idea of a modern Caleb Plummer, let me describe the model-maker. Originally, Mr. Thorp, who is still a young man, devoted himself to the profession of an architect, but the best laid plans are not always profitable, and, being of a studious disposition, he commenced researches into the history of Old London. He, himself, discovered fascination in the work, and conceived the idea of reconstructing the most historical portions of the capital. It was merely to gratify a whim that he rebuilt, in miniature, Old London bridge, but a friend to whom it was shown was of a more practical turn of mind.

"Why not construct the whole of the more interesting portions of London?" he said. "The average Londoner's love of the capital is such that a model, when replete with panoramic equipment would bring him from far and near to see it."

The models of Old London which were on view at the Franco-British Exhibition in 1908 were the result. The prophecy of the friend was more than fulfilled. The receipts during the exhibition amounted to no less than $50,000. But these models of Old London represented prodigious labor and patience that is given to few men to possess. Every detail in the structure was historically correct. Years and years were devoted to a search in dusty archives, and if anyone is now thoroughly conversant with the history and romance of the greatest capital in the world that person is Mr. Thorp. Especially were the Americans interested in the work, and one man from across the Atlantic opened his checkbook with an expressive gesture. "The exhibition as it stood," said Mr. Thorp, "might have been sold 1,000 times, but when a man has devoted many years of his life to the construction of anything, the affection that springs up is high above price." Queen Alexandra was one

SOCIALIST ONCE SOLDIER

BLATCHFORD'S EARLY DAYS IN THE ARMY.

Served in Ranks Thirty Years Ago—Recommends It to All Young Englishmen.

Companion Robert Blatchford was once a Tommy Atkins. So far from seeking to "palliate or deny the atrocious crime," this heretical Socialist has put his military experience in a book called "My Life in the Army," in which he invites every Englishman to follow the example of his own youth. It is only a few months ago that Mr. Blatchford called upon the English people to subordinate everything to the maintenance of their national existence through the instrument of a people trained to arms. His book expresses his opinion that the necessary military training would prove to most young men a physical, mental and moral benefit, and even an agreeable experience.

It is many years since he "went for a soldier," but recently he followed some manoeuvres in England, and found that the appearance and strength of the men were better than in his own day, and he remarks:

PROUD OF THE REGIMENT.

"Also I have to say, emphatically, that a training which produces such results is good for any youth, and that the nation would be richer materially and morally, if every English boy could be so trained. My colleagues and I were greatly cheered and delighted at the sight of the splendid young manhood of that brigade. We would have gone hundreds of miles to see it. We felt ten years younger for the sight. And we deplored the lot of the multitude of young men cooped up in smoky towns, tied to a dull round of labor at desk, or bench, or loom, or counter; growing old before their time."

SOLDIERS NOT FIRE EATERS.

Mr. Blatchford does not believe that military training creates a thirst for blood:

"As bearing on the question of Tommy Atkins' jingoism, I will say a few words about the men who in 1878 were expecting to be sent to fight the Russians. We did not know but that we might have to start any day. And I used to talk to the men about it. They came from many regiments, being reserve men. Nobody wanted to go; nobody expressed any serious reluctance to go. I think the general feeling was almost a feeling of indifference. Soldiers are not easily excited, except about such important matters as pay, rations, and tobacco."

Mr. Blatchford saw service in an old "John Company" regiment just returned from India. The men were a loose lot, they had lots of money and were looking about how to spend it. They were the sort who wanted adventure spiced with danger.

CALL OF THE DRUM.

Mr. Blatchford was asked by his don't murder you in the process. Eyes front!"

ARMY IS GOOD SCHOOL.

Most extraordinary uncivil and one-sided conversation this, but Blatchford thought it was all right, and the army was all right, though it is much better now. There's little or no rum trouble now-a-days, cigarettes is the worst difficulty. But even in the last generation, when the soldiers did "swill orful," it is Mr. Blatchford's belief the service was on the whole good for a young fellow.

The change wrought by the army lie among the recruits was astonishing. In four months louts became soldiers; boys were transformed into men. In June there tramped through the Parkhurst gate a mob of pale-faced, weedy ragamuffins. In September those ragamuffins with town stoop and the town slouch had become clean, well-groomed, alert, upstanding young soldiers, with bronzed faces, muscular limbs, and bright eyes.

THE STONE PEELING OFF

WALLS OF WESTMINSTER ABBEY ARE CRUMBLING.

The Dean Says This is Due to the Action of Coal Smoke on the Stone.

It will come as a surprise to most people to know that the authorities at Westminster Abbey have to wage war unceasingly with the demon smoke, says The London Daily Chronicle. All kinds of efforts are being made to safeguard the fabric, but up to the present no entirely satisfactory method has been discovered.

The Dean of Westminster (Dr. Robinson) was present recently at the annual meeting of the Coal Smoke Abatement Service, held at the Royal United Service Institution, when he made this striking statement:—

"Almost every kind of stone in the Abbey Church is showing constantly increasing signs of depreciation, and I think we can have no doubt that it is due to the products of burning coal."

For the last fifteen years, said the Dean, they had been fighting the enemy as well as they could with the aid of scientific advice. They had been in a and had been trying almost everything that had been suggested to them—not on the most valuable stones in every case unless they were very certain as to their advisers.

He was sorry to say, in regard to one preparation, that, although they had given it a thorough trial, at very considerable expense, it had proved a failure. This was surprising, in view of the fact that it had been tried at Chichester with excellent results. They were, however, hopeful of discovering something which would prevent the stones from peeling.

There was a fall some few years ago from the north front, which caused a great deal of expense, owing to the enormous scaffolding rein duration of the right ventricle and the actual cause of death was heart failure due to the increasing difficulty in the pulmonary circulation.

It was, in short, a case of a type seen every day in thousands of elderly persons. The cause of death in such persons is purely mechanical, the action of the overladen heart being gradually stopped by increasing resistance in the lungs. Could the King have been induced to spare himself more he would probably have lived many years longer. His Majesty had, indeed, suffered from glycosuria of varying degree for a long time, but this did not, so far as can be judged, tend to the shortening of his life. Another condition which must have caused considerable discomfort at times was a certain weakness in the abdominal wall at the site of the operation for appendicitis, which was performed in 1902.

OFTEN OPPOSED DOCTORS.

"We only mention these infirmities as the knowledge of what he had had to endure must increase the admiration which all Britons feel for the high courage and resolution of the sovereign whom they have lost. The state of his health would have been a reasonable excuse for some degree of valetudinarianism. Of this weakness the late King showed no trace. A notable feature in him was the pluck with which he bore himself not only in the illnesses which have been mentioned but during the painful period when he was recovering from a fractured patella. Although he always listened to the advice of his physicians with respect he did not always follow it if it seemed to him to stand in the way of the discharge of his duty."

It should be a comfort to his subjects that he passed away peacefully before he had reached the stage of invalidism which is the frequent fate of sufferers from bronchial asthma.

BAD HEALTH FOR A YEAR.

"Except for the conditions which have been referred to, the King had until lately been a remarkably healthy man. But more than a year ago the strain began to tell on his robust constitution. He was ill when he went to Berlin in the early part of the year; he was ill again in the autumn, and it was noticed by many of those who saw him at the opening of Parliament that he looked very weary and unwell. On his way through France he caught a fresh chill, and during the early days of his stay at Biarritz his condition caused some anxiety. The skill of his physicians and the care of his nurse, combined with the favorable influence of the climate, enabled him to shake off the enemy for a time."

"Had he been a private citizen he might have extended his stay at Biarritz, which was proving beneficial. He felt obliged, however, to return to his post to be ready to play his part in a great constitutional crisis. He returned from Biarritz without stopping. This hurried journey would have taxed his strength even had he been in perfect health. Suffering as he was from the effects of recent illness, the King might fairly have been excused from facing the risk of returning from the south to the Thorp, "might have been sold 4,000 times, but when a man has devoted many years of his life to the construction of anything, the affection that springs up is high above price." Queen Alexandra was one of the most interested visitors to the exhibition, and the sixpence which her majesty paid at the turnstile for admission is a treasured souvenir.

ROYAL MOURNING.

Custom of French Court—Sumptuary Laws in England.

Royal mourning in the past was regulated far more elaborately than now a days. In pre Revolution days, when the French Court was in mourning, the Royal apartments were hung with black, and every looking glass in the king's residences was covered with crape. French queens, when widowed, were expected to remain secluded for six weeks in a room draped with black cloth on which were fastened white velvet dots, supposed to represent tears, says the London Chronicle.

The same custom prevailed in Scotland. In the pamphlet which George Buchanan wrote against Mary Queen of Scots he dwelt severely on the fact that long before the forty days following Darnley's death were spent she showed herself at a window and "looked out on the light of day."

Sumptuary mourning laws were formerly found necessary in England to restrict the extravagance of the nobility and their imitators in the matter of funeral costume. At the end of the fifteenth century it was laid down that dukes, marquises, and archbishops should be allowed sixteen yards of cloth for their gowns, "sloppes" (mourning cassocks) and mantles, earls fourteen, viscounts twelve, barons eight, knights six, and all persons of inferior degree only two. Hoods were forbidden to all except those above the rank of esquire of the king's household.

In the following century Margaret, Countess of Richmond, mother of Henry VII., issued an ordinance for "the reformation of apparel for great estates of women in the time of mourning." So it seems that men and women have met in the extravagance of sorrow.

Even two hundred years ago London tradesmen found that court mourning seriously affected their business. Addison relates that at a tavern he often met a man whom he took for an ardent and eccentric royalist. Every time this man looked through the Gazette he exclaimed, "Thank God! all the reigning families of Europe are well." Occasionally he would vary this formula by making reassuring remarks respecting the health of British royalties. After some time Addison discovered that this universal royalist was a colored silk merchant, who never made a bargain without inserting in the agreement, "All this will take place as long as no royal personage dies in the interval."

Mrs. Newbridge—"Boohoo! Henry threw a cake at me. One that I made myself, too." Mother—"The monster! He might have killed you."

money and were looking about how to spend it. They were the sort who wanted adventure spiced with danger.

CALL OF THE DRUM.

Mr. Blatchford was asked by his first cot-mate why he had enlisted. He could not say. But his cot-mate could tell him. "I suppose it's in the blood. You heard the drum, eh?" Mr. Blatchford did not understand. The other explained: "When a man hears the drum calling he has to go." One is reminded of the summer in Arcola, of the "Drums of the Fore and Aft," and of Bret Harte's drum, which resolved the doubts of the agriculturist who pleaded that he must stay away from the war to gather his harvest.

"But the drum Echoed come. Death shall reap the braver harvest," said the Solemn-sounding drum."

The drill sergeant in Blatchford's soldier days was not the Sergeant Whatsisname who gets credit from Kipling for saving modern Egypt. He was a different bird altogether. The renowned Socialist gives a picturesque sample.

HOW THEY USED TO DRILL.

"He was a tall man, over six feet high, and of a spare and angular figure. His chest was so outrageously padded that it gave him the appearance of a pouter pigeon. He had high shoulders and long legs. He had a comic face, with a red bristly moustache. In the deepest, harshiest bass voice that ever spoke, and with his cheek bulged out by a quid of tobacco, this remarkable warrior at once began to address us. First of all he stalked up very close to the line and glared down at us as though he thought of drawing our teeth. Then he growled in a sepulchral manner: 'You miserable devils; you "miserable" devils.' And we all stood motionless, and with an uncomfortable feeling that we deserved the description thoroughly. 'Now, pay attention to me! You are raw recruits; raw and green. I'm here to dress you and drill you, and frizzle you and grill you, and pepper you and salt you till you're done to a turn; and by whiskers I shall "do" it. Don't grin at me, that man with the mufin face. I'll soon sweat the smiles off you. And look to your front, you poor, unsaved sinners, and learn wisdom.'

DRESS UP. EYES FRONT.

Here the sergeant made a rush at a man near the flank and roared out, "What's your name?"—"Firwood, sir!"—"Don't 'sir' me; call me sergeant. 'What's your father?'—"A tailor, sergeant."—"A tailor! If he doesn't make better coats than soldiers he ought to be hanged for a botch. Go to centre, Firwood, and turn out your toes, you—"miserable" devil." The sergeant stepped backwards again. "Now," he went on, "when I say 'Eyes front' look straight to your front, or as straight as you can, and forget your past sins and listen to me. I shall make men of you. I shall be your father and your mother and your Uncle Tom from Devizes, and you'll live to bless me in the coming years—if I something which would prevent the stones from peeling.

There was a fall some few years ago from the north front, which caused a great deal of expense, owing to the enormous scaffolding required. That fall was due, not to bad building—that was out of the question—but, he thought, to the smoke nuisance.

At the present time they were utilizing a new stone—the grim Portland stone. It was a magnificent stone, one which would stand better than any other this insidious atmosphere of London. But it was

NO STONE FOR CARVING

It seemed almost cruel to coat the Abbey with a substance so very different from that which the early builders loved to employ.

Still, there it was. The interior of the Abbey was safe. It was the exterior—its great coat—which required so largely to be renewed, and must be renewed, in Portland stone. "Of course, if your majesty will stop the cause of the mischief," added the Dean, "we shall give up our experiments with great delight."

Sir W. B. Richmond, the President of the society, said he thought they had reason to congratulate themselves on the work which they had done during the last ten years. The local authorities in London were really beginning to view the smoke nuisance as an unnecessary evil.

"Each year," he said, "the 'London particular' is rarer. The old blinding poison of smoke-laden fog is becoming a thing of the past."

ROYAL BABY'S SHOES.

Little Juliana of Holland Has Wonderful Footgear.

Queen Wilhelmina's baby, heir-apparent to the throne of Holland, is the most fortunate royal youngster in the world in the matter of shoes to cover her little pink toes. An American firm has just made several pairs for her, one out of a piece of goods from the Queen's wedding gown; one of cloth of gold; another of cloth of silver and still another of the very finest patent calf with cloth of silver copping. Beautiful silks and brocaded satins that cost $100 a yard were used. One pair in particular is noteworthy. It is a tiny pair of carriage boots in exact miniature of a woman's boot and made of satin brocade in ecru and mauve with a border of pure white fur and white satin bows. Each style of shoe for this sprig of nobility is made in three colors, white, pink and blue.

THE BRITISH CONSTITUTION

In England they have no written constitution—nothing answering to what is understood in the United States by that term. That which is Great Britain answers to the Constitution is something that grows steadily and fits itself to the ever-changing conditions of the progressive times. It is elastic and in no way bound by the past, except in so far as that which is regarded as of the nature of precedent, can stand every test of the new conditions and new requirements.

GEORGE V. A PHILOSOPHER

OUR NEW KING LEADS A DOMESTIC LIFE.

Character Study of Britain's Monarch, Who Has the Marks of a Scholar.

A man who has led the domestic life of King George never has many close friends, but the King's friendships are the mark of his character. Among his most intimate friends are Sir Charles Cust and Lord Mountstephen. The King also has a deep friendship and admiration for Lord Kitchener and Lord Charles Beresford. He is not on terms of particular intimacy with any of the political leaders, though he shares his father's special liking for Mr. John Burns.

His brother-in-law, Prince Alexander of Teek, enjoys his confidence in a marked degree, and Lord Herbert Vane Tempest, the brother of Lord Londonderry; Lord Hyde, the son of the Earl of Clarendon; the Honorable Henry Stonor and Lord Revelstoke are others of his friends.

PHYSICALLY ALERT.

Viscount Mountmorres gives an interesting character sketch of King George in the London Daily Express. He says:

"A small man, quiet of manner, with a pleasing musical voice, thoughtful, heavy-lidded eyes, and a wide, intellectual forehead, his Majesty George V. gives at first meeting the impression of a scholar or philosopher—when at rest, that is, for his quick, staccato movements, his keen eagerness when interested, reveal the enthusiast, the man of zeal.

"That same physical alertness which has made him perhaps the premier shot of Europe is brought to bear on every matter that appeals to him. His extraordinary nervous energy is to the casual observer cloaked by his studious, reflective look, but it is there—the restless, restless energy of his cousin of Germany.

A GREAT READER.

"Like the Kaiser, too, he is a man of more than ordinary intellectual ability. Sovereigns have of necessity to be schooled in a multitude of subjects, and whatever their taste may be, they must master, at any rate, the rudiments of many branches of knowledge. But our present King's attainments are not the mere result of a painstaking sense of duty.

"As a younger brother, his early training was not shaped by the prospect of a subsequent sovereignty, so that his acquirements are the outcome of natural bent and inborn ability. He is, it is quite safe to say, the most intellectual potentate of modern times. An omnivorous reader, a quick observer and a close reasoner, with decided artistic tastes and exceptional gifts of oratory, he reveals more markedly than any other of the same stock his descent from Prince Albert. Judged as a man, and not as a King, he would rank among the best informed of his day."

TITLES OF THE CROWN

GATHERED IN THE COURSE OF CENTURIES.

Two New Ones Added to Britain's Store Since Victoria's Accession.

It is not often that the general public, though tolerably familiar with the abbreviated versions inscribed in the coins it uses, has the opportunity of seeing the titles appertaining to the British crown set out fully in black and white as they are revealed in the proclamation signed recently at St. James' Palace by the first Privy Council of King George V., says the London Morning Post. It is, therefore, not an unsuitable moment to consider how, and from what beginnings and in what order the Crown, in the course of centuries, has gathered about itself these titles. Queen Victoria's title on her accession in 1837 was "Queen of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Defender of the Faith," and the legend around, say, an 1855 shilling runs "Victoria Dei Gratia Britannia Reg. F. D.," whereas King George is proclaimed as "King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and of the British Dominions Beyond the Seas, Defender of the Faith, Emperor of India," and his coins, when struck, will bear the words, or abbreviations, "Georgius V. D. G. Britt. Omn. Rex F. D. Ind. Imp." Two fresh titles, then have been added since 1837—both, in fact, within the last thirty-four years.

"KINGS OF THE ENGLISH."

Of this mass of titles the nucleus is, of course, that of "King of England," or in its original form, "King of English." Legend attributes this appellation to Egbert, the famous King of Wessex, who at the opening of the ninth century practically united Britain under himself as single ruler. Not, however, to Egbert, nor even to Alfred the Great, belongs the honor of having been the first "King of the English," but to Alfred's grandson, Athelstan, a warlike and gorgeous sovereign, who subdued the Danes of Northern England and such chieftains as still maintained an independent existence in the remoter parts of the island. Of the outlying countries, disrespectfully spoken of to-day in the heat of controversy as "the Celtic fringe," Wales was the first to be incorporated with England under one crown. Edward I. annexed Wales in 1284, declaring by the Statutum Wallie that the country and its inhabitants had been brought in proprietatis nostrae dominium. It was, as every one knows, the birth of the luckless Edward IV. in Carnarvon Castle that led to the bestowal of the famous title "Prince of Wales" upon the heirs to the English throne.

TRAVELS OF GEORGE V.

AMONG THE POSSESSIONS OF GREAT BRITAIN.

Beyond Question the New King is the Most Travelled of Monarchs.

King George V. of England is without question the most travelled of monarchs, the London Times says. Few, moreover, of his subjects, as he said to the Royal Colonial Institute in 1908, have landed on so many different portions of British soil.

His travels began at an early age, as his education was entirely a naval one. He entered the Britannia in 1878 and only two years later embarked upon a long cruise in the Bacchante with his brother, the late Duke of Clarence, which took him first to the West Indies, and thence to Maderia, Simon's Bay, the Australian ports, Fiji, Yokohama, Hong Kong and Singapore.

HIS IMPERIAL MISSION.

In the year following the death of Queen Victoria he undertook, as Duke of Cornwall and York, the great Imperial mission through which he is chiefly known to his subjects in the overseas dominions of the crown. Sailing from Portsmouth in the Ophir on March 15, he went first to Australia, where he opened the first Parliament of the Commonwealth, then to New Zealand, thence to South Africa, and finally to Canada and Newfoundland. It was after his return from this voyage that, speaking at Guildhall on the evening of the day when he was created Prince of Wales, he delivered his famous message from the Empire to the Motherland and called upon his countrymen to "wake up." Only two years ago he once more visited the east of Canada in order to attend the celebrations of the Tercentenary of Quebec.

ARDUOUS JOURNEY.

Exactly thirty years, all but a day, after the late King set foot in India, the present King and Queen landed in Bombay on November 5, 1905, on their tour through the Indian Empire. The tour was prolonged and arduous, but it was marked by complete success.

The King on his arrival said that he and the Queen hoped to carry home with them "not only a warm sympathy and affection for the people of India, but an increased and abiding interest in India's wants and problems and an acquaintance with the various classes, official and non-official, British and Indian, who under God's providence are laboring to one end—the well being of India and the happiness of her peoples."

TOUR IN INDIA.

Within the space of four and a half months they saw more of India than most people are privileged to see in a lifetime, and everywhere they left an abiding impression of gracious and kindly interest in the welfare of the people. At Calcutta the King laid the foundation stone of the Victoria

KING OF IRELAND.

The Anglo-Saxon Kings had vague pretensions to the lordship of Ireland, which they had no power whatever to translate into a semblance of actual domination. Stubbs says that Edgar apparently acted as patron of the Ostmen—Danish settlers who had colonized a strip of the eastern coast and quotes authorities to show that coins of Etheired and Canute were struck at Dublin. Henry II's expedition in 1171, however, was the first definite attempt to exact from the Irish chieftains recognition of the English sovereign's lordship. Prince John was made by his father lord of the island. It was intended that he should be crowned King, and the crown of gold was actually sent to him by the Pope, but the coronation never took place. Had John been crowned King Ireland would have been included with England in the royal title at John's accession to the English throne in 1199, but as it happened the idea abandoned by Henry II. was not revived until, more than three centuries later, Henry VIII. assumed in 1541 the title of King of Ireland.

England and Scotland were brought under one ruler by the accession of James I. to the English throne in 1603, and early in his reign the well-known post-nati case, known also as Calvin's case, decided that Scotsmen born after his accession were English citizens, and vice versa. At the Restoration the hereditary right of Charles II. to the Scottish throne was declared by the Parliament at Edinburgh, and twenty-eight years later, when James II. was expelled, the Scottish crown was as a matter of course offered to William and Mary. Still, the complete union of the crowns did not take place till the passage in 1707 of the Act of Union, which declared England and Scotland to be one kingdom, and Anne to be the first sovereign of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland.

ODD MARRIAGE STATISTICS.

All But Seven Parisian Married Couples Hate Each Other.

There are only seven really happy married couples in Paris, according to some singular statistics just published of the relative state of conjugal felicity in the capital.

There are 1,362 wives who have left their husbands for others, and 2,371 husbands who have run away from their wives; 4,120 couples have separated amicably, while no fewer than 191,023 "menages" live at warfare under the same roof.

The number of those who, "hating one another cordially, mask in public ferocious enmity beneath appearances of assumed politeness," is very large, amounting to 162,349, while the record in the list is held by couples who are visibly indifferent to one another—namely, 510,132.

Further, 1,102 couples are wrongly thought to be happily married, while there are 135 "menages" happy in comparison with others more unhappy. Unfortunately this analytical pessimist does not furnish the sources of his information, pupils who ride astride.

Flying Machines, Hatpin Protectors, and Sour Milk.

The British Patent Office received 30,503 applications last year. Of these 648 were from women inventors. The United States was responsible for 731, Germany 431, Canada 42. Patents in the field of locomotion are more numerous than in any other class. While railroads and horse vehicles show a falling off in the attention of inventors, but just as many devices for the improvement and safeguarding of motor vehicles are being worked out. These have largely increased with speed indicating and signalling. Then in aeronautics there were three times as many patents applied for last year as in the year before.

STATIONMASTER'S LUCK.

A romantic story of a stationmaster's good fortune comes from Selby, in Yorkshire. By the death of Squire Tomlinson, of Aysgarth, Wensleydale, Mr. William Bell, stationmaster at Selby, finds himself heir to a large country mansion and an estate the value of which is said to run to six figures. Mr. Bell is a distant relative of the late squire, his mother having been Mr. Tomlinson's cousin, and he was the old gentleman's last living relation. He now becomes Squire of Aysgarth, and will retire from the North-Eastern Railway after a term of service of forty-five years.

COMBINED CRIME AND ART.

Burglar Who Managed to Keep Up Air of Respectability.

It is alleged that Herr May the German philanthropist and author recently proved to have been a burglar and bandit in early life, in addition to the improving literature of which he was the acknowledged author, also published anonymously a series of cheap and detrimental fiction, in which his experiences as a bandit were utilized. In other respects, however, he appears to have wholly forsaken his wicked ways, says the London Standard.

If this is so, and it would be kinder to give him the benefit of any doubt, the case only bears a partial resemblance to that of the celebrated Charles Peace. That now notorious burglar was actively practicing his real profession when he was known to the sedatest society of Peckham as a well-to-do and cultured gentleman of impeccable antecedents.

Peace was a past master in the art of imposture, and had the makings of a brigand in him, if he never got the chance of following the more adventurous and perhaps more picturesque branches of crime. He, too, managed to establish some reputation for piety by his partiality for sacred music. His house was crammed with musical instruments, but he never allowed anything else to be played.

Another criminal who managed to impose on his friends and acquaintances was Thomas Wainwright, who was certainly a forger and probably a poisoner, but who had been a fashionable writer and critic and was the friend of Charles Lamb, Talfourd and De Quincey. "The kind, light-hearted Wainwright," as Elia called him, was a thoroughgoing and heartless scoundrel and the offences for which he was sentenced to transportation for life were only incidents in a long career of wrongdoing. Whether he really confessed that he poisoned the unfortunate Miss Abercromby, urging in extenuation that she had very thick ankles, may be doubted, but quite enough has been proved to his discredit. At the same time it is improbable that he would ever, like Herr Karl May, have returned to respectability even if the opportunity had been allowed him.

Another and less known man of letters who combined literature with crime was George Barrington, transported to Botany Bay for pocket picking in 1790. He did recover his character, became high constable of Paramatta, and was much thought of in official circles for his good conduct. His literary fame rests mainly on the often quoted description of the true patriots: "Be it understood, we left our country for our country's good."

"Jabez is gettin' used to public speakin', ain't he?" "Oh, yes, I remember when you could hardly get him to stand up, an' now you can hardly get him to sit down."

DOVER TO CALAIS AND BACK

An Englishman Crossed the Channel Twice in His Aeroplane.

A despatch from London says: Charles Stewart Rolls, the youngest son of Lord Llangattock, on Thursday crossed the English Channel twice in an aeroplane. Flying from Dover to Sangatte, near Calais, France, he circled over that village, flew back to Dover without descending, circled over Dover and finally descended, after a magnificent flight of ninety minutes, during which time he covered over fifty miles. He is the first English aviator to cross the Channel, and the first airman to make the double journey.

Rolls had been at Dover for some time waiting for a favorable opportunity to make the Channel flight. One came on Thursday evening, and was immediately taken advantage of. At 5.30 the wind dropped almost to a dead calm, and Rolls arranged to start an hour later. Almost exactly at the stroke of 6.30 Rolls took his seat in his short Wright biplane, and, with a cheering cheer from the spectators, among whom were his parents, Lord and Lady Llangattock, and his brother-in-law and sister, Sir John and Lady Shelley, he rose into the air in splendid style. The biplane made a big sweep toward Dover Castle, then back along the cliffs, and headed straight to sea at a height of about 600 feet. Rolls increased his height to about 800 feet while within a mile of land. He was followed as fast as possible by a tug, which kept him in sight half-way.

About an hour after his departure word reached Dover from Calais that Rolls was returning and by 7.40, with the aid of glasses, his biplane could be seen far out over the channel. The aeroplane soon grew visible to the naked eye, and when it was over Dover lightship, 2½ miles from the shore, the channel steamers and yachts and vessels in the harbor set their tooters going, while the crowds cheered themselves hoarse. Rolls didn't descend at once.

Gradually decreasing his height, he circled above the outer towers of Dover Castle, then made a beautifully judged encircling movement over the ancient Norman keep and finally after a series of other evolutions landed in the meadow from which he had started, as lightly as a bird stops.

While over Sangatte, Rolls dropped three weighted envelopes containing messages of greeting to the Aero Club of France. He said his experience all the way was most exhilarating.

STATUE OF KING EDWARD.

Montreal Citizens Will Erect One to His Late Majesty.

A despatch from Montreal says: At a mass meeting of citizens, both English and French, held on Wednesday, it was decided, on the motion of Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, to erect on a suitable site in the city a statue worthy of the late King Edward. Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, who was elected President of a general committee comprising leading citizens in all walks of life, said that the monument to Edward VII. would not be a rich man's monument, but the fifty-cent contributions of the poor would be as welcome as the checks of the wealthy. Lord Starthcona and Lord Mountstephen are the patrons, with Sir Edward Clouston Hon. Treasurer. The feature of Wednesday's meeting was its cosmopolitan character. Jewish rabbis rubbed shoulders with Anglican-clergy and Methodist ministers, while the French-Canadian element was strongly represented.

A CHURCH DESECRATED.

The Host Stolen From St. Michael's, Montreal.

A despatch from Montreal says: An extraordinary theft was perpetrated on Wednesday when St. Michael's Roman Catholic Church was entered, the tabernacle of the main altar broken open, and the "Sacred Host" carried away. The theft was discovered by Father Kiernan, pastor of the church. The benediction ring was also taken. Churches have been broken into before and sacred vessels taken, but this is the first time on record in Montreal that the Sacred Host has been stolen. The outrage has caused excitement among the residents of the parish, and Archbishop Pruchesi had to give special permission for the benediction to be celebrated on Wednesday night on account of the desecration.

THE CENTURY OF PEACE

Preparations for Celebrating at the Niagara *Frontier

A despatch from Buffalo says: "Peace hath her victories no less renowned than war" is the motto of the International Committee representing the Niagara frontier, which is arranging for the border celebration of the one hundred years of peace enjoyed since 1812. It is proposed to make this an occasion of international rejoicing.

A general meeting will be held at Niagara, N. Y., June 16, to discuss plans. At this meeting delegates will attend representing the Chamber of Commerce and Manufacturers' Club, the Niagara Frontier Landmarks Association, Buffalo Historical Society, Boards of Trade at Niagara Falls, N. Y., and North Tonawanda, Tonawanda, Lewiston; the civil authorities of the village of Youngstown, N. Y., and Queenston, Ont., also delegates from Hamilton, Toronto, Chippawa, Niagara-on-the-Lake, Ont., and La Salle, N. Y.

The original intention was to have the celebration take place in 1912, but the consensus of opinion now is that it will not be held before 1914 or 1915.

Unknown Man Committed Suicide at Niagara.

A despatch from Niagara Falls, N. Y., says: Another unknown, a man apparently about 45 years old, plunged to death from Prospect Point early on Wednesday. Posing a moment balanced on the guard fence, he threw himself forward, when a woman tourist, who had approached from her automobile for a closer view of the rapids, called to her chauffeur to help in preventing the man's execution of vaudalism of a particularly wanton character by breaking and practically destroying the athletic trophies, breaking the hammers and other fixtures of the piano, slitting the leather seats of the chairs and cutting the rugs and carpets. The deed is all the more noticeable in view of the fact that a big ten-days' Y. M. C. A. campaign to raise a large sum of money is being successfully carried on and is now at its height. The police are working on the case and the Attorney-General's Department has been notified.

Captain Scott's Expedition Sails From the Thames.

A despatch from London says: The British Antarctic expedition set sail on Wednesday. Captain Scott has announced December, 1911, as the date for his arrival at the South Pole. After receiving visits and good wishes from hundreds of persons, including Captain Bartlett of the Arctic steamer Roosevelt, the Terra Nova sailed on Wednesday afternoon from the Thames for Cardiff. After coaling there she will proceed to New Zealand, where Captain Scott will come aboard. The 10,000 mile voyage into the Antarctic will then be continued. Captain Scott and Lieutenant E. R. Evans, second in command, claim that they have the best equipped expedition that has started on a polar search. The officers and scientists to the number of twenty-eight, and the crew of twenty-seven, are all picked men, selected from the many hundreds who have volunteered.

TWO BANKERS SENT TO JAIL.

They Were Concerned in Bribery of Pittsburg Councilmen.

A despatch from Pittsburg, Pa., says: After having pleaded no defence to charges of conspiracy and bribery in connection with the recent municipal corruption exposures, two bankers were sentenced to jail and fined in the Criminal Court on Wednesday. E. H. Jennings, President of the Columbia National Bank, and F. A. Griffen, cashier of the same institution, appeared before five judges, the former being sentenced to a fine of $500 and two months in jail, and the latter to a fine of $500 and four months in jail. Jennings and Griffen confessed to the Court some time ago that they had contributed their share of a pool with which to influence legislation in the City Council looking towards the selection of their bank as one of the city depositories.

WINNIPEG'S TAXES.

Increase of Fifty Millions in the Assessment.

A despatch from Winnipeg says: The estimated assessment of realty values in the city for 1910 is $153,000,000, as against $108,000,000 for the last year, and the ratepayers are interested in the possibility of a reduction in the rate to something like ten mills. This is in face of the fact that the estimated amount required from civic taxes is fifty per cent. greater than last year. This year the land is assessed at full selling value, which is a more or less debatable quantity. Prices just now are higher than ever before. From the assessment notices issued on Wednesday the ratepayers learn that advances on lands are about sixty per cent., and buildings, while supposed to be assessed at seventy per cent. value, are practically unchanged.

TWENTY-FIVE MEN KILLED

Premature Explosion in Tunnel Near Where Quantity of Powder Was Stored.

A despatch from Ogden, Utah, says: Twenty-five workmen were killed in an explosion on Wednesday in a quarry of the Union Portland Cement works at Devil's Slide, Utah, thirty miles east of Ogden. The explosion blew down the telegraph and telephone poles and communication with the scene of the accident was limited to a brief message sent out by a courier from Morgan, Utah, soon after the disaster. Most of the killed are Japanese and Greeks who made up the quarry gang of 75 to 100 men. The injured are reported to number a score or more. The victims were blown to pieces, some of the bodies were blown a hundred yards. Among the many missing is Hugh McGuire, foreman of the quarry. A premature explosion in a tunnel above the cement plant was the direct cause of the explosion below. More than 30 kegs of powder were stored near where the men were working.

IMMIGRATION FOR APRIL

About 50,000 Settlers, Nearly One-Half From the United States, Came In.

A despatch from Ottawa says: During April immigrants poured into Canada at the record rate of 1,600 per day. Of the daily influx the average number from the United States was nearly 700. The total immigration for the month was 42,267, an increase of 24,030, or 99 per cent. Last month April's high record was again beaten, although the definite figures will not be available for some time. Since the first of the year the total immigration has been nearly equal to the total immigration for the whole of last year and the character of the settlers in respect to physical fitness, worldly possessions and adaptability for life in Canada is by far the best in the history of the Dominion. For the first quarter of 1910 the total immigration has been 98,132, as compared with 49,568 for the first quarter of 1909. Arrivals from the United States during April totalled 20,443, an increase of 8,834, or 62 per cent. over April of last year. Arrivals via ocean ports, of whom over 75 per cent. were English-speaking, totalled 27,824, an increase of 16,196, or 139 per cent., as compared with the corresponding month of last year.

GOVERNOR-GENERAL'S PLANS

Aims to Cover Four Thousand Miles in Twenty Days on His Trip.

A despatch from Ottawa says: From Norway House, at the head of Lake Winnipeg, by way of Hayes River to Port Nelson, and thence by Government steamer to St. John's Nfld., a distance of nearly 4,000 miles in twenty days, is the record which his Excellency Earl Grey aims to establish in his final sight-seeing Canadian journey next July. Earl Grey will go to Port Nelson via the Hayes River instead of by the more northerly route via the Nelson River and along the projected line of the Hudson's Bay Railway, because the former route is more adaptable and quicker for canoe travel. The character of the country to be traversed will be largely the same as that through which the new railway will run. The trip from Norway House to Port Nelson will occupy about ten days, and it is expected that with average weather conditions the voyage by steamer to Fort Churchill and through Hudson's Straits down the Labrador coast to St. John's can be made in twelve days, allowing for stops en route at Prefontaine Bay or the northwest coast of Ungava, and at Dr. Grenfell's Mission Stations in Labrador. ## Cook in Comfort

You no longer need wear yourself out with the weakening heat of an intensely hot kitchen. You can cook in comfort.

Here is a stove that gives no outside heat. All its heat is concentrated at the burners. An intense blue flame (hotter than either white or red) is thrown upwards but not around. All the heat is utilized in cooking—none in outside heating.

New Perfection

WICK BLUE FLAME

entirely removes the discomfort of cooking. Apply a match and immediately the stove is ready. Instantly an intense heat is projected upwards against the pot, pan, kettle or boiler, and yet there is no surrounding heat—no smell—no smoke.

Why? Because The New Perfection Oil Cook-Stove is scientifically and practically perfect. You cannot use too much wick—it is automatically controlled. You get the maximum heat—no smoke. The burner is simple. One wipe with a cloth cleans it—consequently there is no smell.

The New Perfection Oil Cook-Stove is wonderful for year-round use, but especially in summer. Its heat operates upward to pan, pot, or kettle, but not beyond or around. It is useless for heating a room.

Martin-Senour Paint

100% Pure, Preserves

It feeds the hungry open pores of the wood with pure linseed oil, lead and zinc—making the surface absolutely impervious to climatic changes.

It seals wood from dampness—prevents it from splitting, cracking, from sun and frost, blistering heat and blowing dust, which help the processes of decay and ruin. Good pure paint buys more than 100 cents worth of insurance against the ravages of time.

The ingredients of a pure paint are well known. In the main they are Carbonate of Lead, Oxide of Zinc pure Colors, well ground by specially adapted machinery, and thinned with pure linseed oil and pure turpentine dryer. A building owner who fails to recognize the great importance of selecting the right paint, will see his property value decrease while he grows aged and peevish wondering why.

The Dewar Challenge Trophy is awarded yearly by the ROYAL AUTOMOBILE CLUB for the most meritorious performance of the year under the general regulations for certified trials.

The New Daimler engine has now been in the hands of the public for nearly 15 months, quite long enough to prove its merit; owners are sending in testimonials by every post and we should like to forward to any person or persons interested a complete set of literature fully explaining this marvelous new motor. Send also for our new illustrated booklet, "The Dewar Trophy and how it was won," a history of the Greatest Engine Test on Record.

The growth of Canada in population and prosperity is indicated by the progress of Canadian banks, which now have 2,326 branches, all but fifty of them in the Dominion itself. Of the 2,276 in Canada, 747 are west of Ontario, where loans to grain raisers are a profitable source of income.

Kingston Whig.

The Education department will pay the fare and part of the board of those who attend the summer schools in Northern Ontario and the normal school at North Bay. What is the meaning of this? Has the normal school been misplaced? Or are the teachers-in-training shown extra consideration for any reason?

Brookville Times.

The czar of Russia has an income of $10,000,000. The German emperor gets $4,500,000. The emperor of Austria gets $3,900,000, and the King of Italy gets $3,100,000. So that the modest $2,500,000, estimated for the maintenance of the monarch of Great Britain and his family and household seems but a small sum by comparison with other powers. Compared with the mammoth incomes of United States millionaires the British monarch is by no means a rich man. He has far less to spend upon himself than the republican plutocrats who make so great a boast of their democracy.

HAVE YOU A BAD SORE?

If so, remember these facts—Zam-Buk is now the most widely used balm in Canada yet four years ago it was unknown here! Why has it become so popular? Because it heals sores, cures skin diseases, and does what is claimed for it. Why not let it heal your sore?

Remember that Zam-Buk is altogether different to the ordinary ointments. Most of these consist of animal fats. Zam-Buk contains no trace of any animal fat, or any mineral matter. It is absolutely herbal.

Remember that Zam-Buk is at the same time healing, soothing, and antiseptic. Kills poison instantly, and all harmful germs. It is suitable alike

PINK CLOUDS AND SULPHUR.

A PECULIAR STORY

By Congress Man who Has Narrow Escape from Death.

L. B. Cannon of Congress, also well known in Phoenix, believes that he saw and felt something of the passage of the comet on May 19. He has written the Phoenix Republican as follows, describing his strange and thrilling experience that day:

"As Halley's comet seems to be the all-absorbing topic of interest at present, an experience of mine on May 19 may be of interest to some of your readers. On that day I was riding on the desert, ten or twelve miles west of the town of Congress in this territory. The day was hot and close and sultry, although I could not see a cloud near. There was a peculiar feeling in the air.

About 3 p. m. I noticed a peculiar looking cloud that seemed to suddenly appear a short distance ahead of me and at some height above the earth. It was of singular pink color or red dish cast. It was perhaps a quarter of a mile in extent.

"What particularly astonished me was the singular shape of the cloud—the top was flat, straight across horizontally. The lower part hung down in points some lower than others, like any other cloud in appearance, but all parts had the same pink color. As I rode toward it I noticed that it was settling slowly toward the earth. There was not a breath of air stirring. When I got to it I found it was dust. The edge was directly over me, and as it settled down on me, a strong, gassy, sulphurous odor prevailed the air, and my eyes and nostrils and throat and lungs began to burn and smart as though they were on fire. I gasped for breath. My horse began to cough and shake his head and clear his nostrils. I turned him and rushed out of the cloud, none too soon.

"As I reached the fresh air my horse began to sway and stagger. I thought he would fall, so I sprang to the ground. When I tried to stand I almost fell. My knees gave way under me, I was so weak. My horse stood with legs far apart, his ears lopped and his nostrils wide open, panting as if he had had a heartbreaking run.

"The fresh air soon revived us and I led my horse further away from the danger line. The cloud was settling to the earth fast now. I could see over the top as I stood on the ground. It still held the same shape—as flat as a door on top. In a few seconds it all settled down on the earth, and then a strange, uncanny sight presented itself to my eyes, a pink spot in the gray desert. The dry grass, the scrub mesquite and cat claw brush and the ground all covered with pink dust. It looked like a lake of pink.

"After perhaps half an hour I got on my horse and ventured to the edge of the pink spot. A plain odor of gas assailed me, but I felt no ill effect. Then the thought occurred to me to collect some of the dust as a curiosity. I had no way to carry any except in my pocket handkerchief. I thought of placing that on the ground and shaking the dust down on it. I went to a small greasewood bush to do so, when I noticed a dead jackrabbit under the bush. I pulled it out and examined it. I found no signs of injury on the body.

Ants That Strike.

Certain kinds of black ants have little yellow ants which do most of their work for them. Once in awhile these little yellow fellows will go on strike, and the blacks try to force them back to work by cutting off their food supply. If that does not succeed, they will attack the strikers in force or make a raid and get another gang of yellows into the colony. But the newcomers, as a rule, join the strikers. The strike ends by the yellows escaping and founding a colony for themselves, or they give in and settle down to work again.

Instinct of the Mudfish.

The remarkable instinct which causes the mudfish to roll himself in a ball of mud when the dry season approaches is a wonderful provision of nature, intended solely, it would seem, to prevent the extinction of the species. The most interesting fact about this fish is that it breathes by means of its gills when in its native element and by means of lungs during its voluntary imprisonment in the mud cocoon.

Still Cheaper.

"Isn't it cheaper to move than to pay rent?" I inquired of the young married man.

"I suppose it is," he replied, with a settled air, "but my plan is cheaper than either. I live with my father-in-law."

SICK HEADACHE

A Symptom of Troubles Which are Removed by Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills.

Sick headaches are not merely afflictions to be borne as patiently as possible—they are danger signals. They never come unless the digestive system is out of order, and their regular recurrence is proof positive of serious trouble and a warning that should be heeded promptly.

These terrible headaches permanently banished by Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills.

Sick headaches are caused by Indigestion, Bilioussness or Constipation, and no amount of "headache powders" will do more than temporarily relieve them. The only way to get rid of them entirely is to cure the Constipation or Indigestion that is causing them, and nothing will do this quicker or more effectively than Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills.

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills are purely vegetable in character, and are free from any harmful drug. For over fifty years they have been in constant use in Canada, and have proved most effective in regulating the bowels, aiding digestion, banishing sick headaches and restoring vigorous health.

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills have stood this test for over fifty years, 25c. at all dealers. W. H. Comstock Co., Ltd., Brockville, Ont.

my pocket handkerchief. I thought of placing that on the ground and shaking the dust down on it. I went to a small greasewood bush to do so, when I noticed a dead jackrabbit under the bush. I pulled it out and examined it. I found no signs of injury on the body. The body was still warm and the limbs were limber yet. It surely met death from the deadly gas. After a lot of work I managed to collect a small amount of the dust by going from bush to bush. This I securely tied up in my handkerchief. Then I got on my horse and rode home.

"The next morning I thought I would visit the dust spot again and see what effect the gas had on the vegetation there. The wind was blowing a gale and it blew hard all day. When I arrived at the spot the wind had blown all the dust off the brush and grass and so scattered it around that there was not much of it to be seen. In riding over the dust zone I found two more dead jackrabbits and a little dead bird. Their bodies were fresh. They surely were overcome by the gas the day before. That this phenomenon was due to the influence of the comet I have no doubt. I have been in many dust and sand storms on the desert of Arizona in the last twenty-five years, but I never saw one like the one just described.

The dust collected by me is entirely different from any I have ever seen and others that have examined it say the same. That the gas was fatal to the animal life I have abundant evidence from the narrow escape of myself and horse and the finding of the dead rabbits and bird.

"Now then, what caused this death cloud? Was it caused by a fragment of some body exploding into space and falling to the earth in the shape of poisonous gas and dust? Or was it a meteor displaced by some atmospheric disturbance and caused to burst and fall, dealing death to all in its path? What unseen force passed that pall of death down upon the earth in that shape? Think of the appalling results had that mantle of death been of greater dimensions and had it settled down on some thickly populated portion of the globe, a city for instance!" I am waiting to hear the guesses of the 'star sharps' on this subject.

Enlivening the Table.

"You'll be the star of our dinner table to-night," said a materfamilias after an amusing conversation with a friend she had chanced to meet, "for I'll tell the family all the amusing things you've been saying. It's a rule of the house that we must try to remember all interesting happenings, so that they can be served up with our food. I don't suppose the men Fred meets in business are really especially brilliant, but whenever they do display any wit he always tells us, and in this way we have grown to feel such an interest in them that we can enjoy hearing even of quite unimportant events with which they are connected. It's just the same with Ned's and Edith's friends, and you have no idea what a jolly crowd we have at our table sometimes, and it helps our digestion wonderfully."

He Saw Double.

Mr. Lushleigh came up the stairway with his shoes in his hand and his hat hanging precariously upon one ear, singing, "We Won't Go Home Till Morning" with wondrous disregard for pronunciation and melody. Mrs. Lushleigh met him with a cold stare and exclaimed:

"Well, to see you in such a condition! William Henry Lushleigh, I am beside myself with indignation!" "Thash ri," agreed Mr. Lushleigh, moodily watching the bureau as it waltzed about him, "thash ri—you're beshide y'shelf. I c'n see you right there beshide y'shelf. Glad you tol' me. Was beginning to think I sh a bigamist."

MEN SHAVEN AND UNSHAVEN.

Tendency of Civilization Is to Eliminate Facial Hair.

While preparing recently for their examinations, the young men of a Western university voted not to shave until after the examinations, on the ground that growing beards would serve to remove temptation to neglect their work for social diversions. About the same time, the newspapers told of the solemn decision of the young ladies in another institution to enforce a social boycott against the male students who were wearing or coaxing into existence, moustaches.

The two incidents illustrate the present attitude of the social world toward shaven and unshaven men. Not that a bearded man is ostracized by the world at large, whatever may be the case in undergraduate circles, but that clean-shaven faces among men of all ages are now becoming the rule.

It was not always thus. In ancient times, the beard was the badge of manhood, the insignia of dignity and authority. This is still true in the Jewish race; and the strongest oath of the devout Mohammedan is "by the beard of the prophet." Note the long braided beards of the Kings of Assyria and Babylon, as indicated by the sculptured images which have survived. In those days slaves were compelled to be smooth-shaven, and the beardless youth was an object of scorn. In Greece and Rome the custom varied with the periods. Most of the great Romans of later times were beardless.

In the middle ages and in the Elizabethan era beards were generally worn, although occasionally a beardless monarch led a change in style which made the barbers happy. In Great Britain and this country the beard was almost unknown in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. In the nineteenth century it came into general favor. Most of the young men of a college graduating class of the 'fifties and 'sixties wore all the beard they could raise. Then the young men took to the moustache, which is now far less common.

When man accuses woman of being a creature of the arbitrary whims of fashion, she may well retort by pointing to his beard—or to the place where it might be.

Guarding the Cash.

The gypsies in some parts of Europe have a curious way of looking after the honesty of their money collector. The person intrusted with the mission of taking the hat around among the crowd has a living fly put into his left hand, while he holds the hat with his right. When he returns with the funds he must bring the fly back alive as a sign that he has not taken any money from the common property, but if the fly be wanting or even dead he does not get even his share of the money.

Lockwood's Wit.

Probably no one had more ready wit than Sir Frank Lockwood, the lawyer. He was a tall man, and an unruly member of his audience once called out to him in the middle of his speech "Go it, telescope!"

"My friend is mistaken in applying that term to me," Sir Frank quietly said. "He ought to claim it for himself; for, though he cannot draw me out, I think I can both see through him and shut him up."

On another occasion one of his political opponents called, "All lawyers are rogues!"

"I am glad," Sir Frank quickly rejoined, "to greet this gentleman as a member of my profession; but he need not proclaim our shortcoming to the world."

At last a remedy has been discovered that will positively destroy this pest. That Dandruff is caused by germs is accepted by every sensible person. Dandruff is the root of all hair evils. Salvia will kill the dandruff germs and remove dandruff in ten days, or money back. Mr. Jessop guarantees it. It will grow hair, stop itching scalp, falling hair, and make the hair thick and abundant. It prevents hair from turning gray, and adds life and lustre. Salvia is a hair dressing that has become the favorite with women of taste and culture who know the social value of beautiful hair. A large, generous bottle costs only 50c, at leading druggists everywhere; and in Napanee by Mr. Jessop. The word "Salvia" (Latin for sage) is on every bottle.

Wit Saved His Neck.

A story is told of a prisoner before Lord Justice Fitzgibbon, at the time when the latter was one of the Justices of Appeal of Ireland, whose ready wit probably saved his neck. Lord Fitzgibbon was holding assizes in Tipperary County, when a man was brought before him on indictment for murder. The case was proved that the victim came to his death by being hit with a stick in the hands of the defendant; but the doctor testified that he had what they called in medical parlance a "paper skull."

The case looked dark for the prisoner, however, and the jury returned a verdict of guilty. As the man was brought before the court for sentence it was noticed that his lordship had his black cap in his hand.

"Have you anything to say why sentence should not be pronounced upon you?" demanded Lord Fitzgibbon.

The man looked for a moment and then said, "No, your lordship, I have nothing to say; but I should like to ask one question."

"What is that, my man?" said Fitzgibbon.

"I should like to know what a man with a head like that was doing in Tipperary?"

The black cap was put away and a prison sentence imposed.

Pain in Heart

"For two years I had pain in my heart, back and left side. Could not draw a deep breath or lie on left side, and any little exertion would cause palpitation. Under advice I took Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy and Nervine. I took about thirteen bottles, am in better health than I ever was, and have gained 14 pounds."

MRS. LILLIE THOMAS,
Upper Sandusky, Ohio.

For many years Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy has been very successful in the treatment of heart troubles, because of its tonic effect upon the heart nerves and muscles. Even in severe cases of long standing it has frequently prolonged life for many years after doctors had given up all hope, as proven by thousands of letters we have received from grateful people.

DR. MILES MEDICAL CO., Toronto,

Why the black bass bites on one day and refuses every bait the next; why he takes helgramites and other helgramites on Monday, grasshoppers on Tuesday and frogs on Wednesday; why he bites only on dark days for a fortnight and then shifts his biting humor to days bright and breezy; why you find him today on sandy bottom and tomorrow on mud and the day after on the rocks, are baffling traits of the bass that relate merely to his sporting relations with the angler. But there are other mysteries that puzzle the naturalist and bear on the organic life of the fish.

Up in Maine are two bass rivers not far apart. In one the fish run often to four, even to five, pounds; in the other rarely above a pound and a half. In one of the largest lakes of New Hampshire the writer's score for a whole season once ran up to 398 fish. Food was evidently abundant, for the bass were "chunky" and the viscera thick with fatty tissues. Yet the post-mortem showed in the stomach only glutinous, unrecognizable white matter, and the largest bass of the whole season drew the scales at but a pound and three-quarters. What did those bass live on, and why didn't they grow bigger? Again, in the uplands of Connecticut are two large lakes some eight miles apart. In the one bass are often caught in winter ice fishing; in the other lake almost never in winter, though in its open summer waters bass fishing is the better. Remembering that the bass are supposed to hibernate and in fairly deep waters, would not that fact argue in the late season darker outward hues and deeper bronzes? Yet the head of a large bass hatchery has observed a silvery change of the bass at the approach of winter when his habit and habitat would imply the exact reverse. Such are a few of the anatomical enigmas of the black bass that make him and his paradoxes an interesting study for that open minded angler who blends the naturalist with the sportsman.—Collier's Weekly.

A Unique Volume.

What is perhaps the most curious book in the world is possessed by the Prince de Ligne. This work is neither printed nor in manuscript, the text being formed of letters cut in vellum and pasted on blue paper. Notwithstanding this extraordinary method of presenting the text the book is as easy of perusal as if printed in the boldest type. All the characters shown are cut with marvelous dexterity and precision.

This unique volume bears the title "The Book of All Passions of Our Lord Jesus Christ, With Characters Not Composed of Any Materials."

It is said that Rudolph II., the Roman emperor, offered no less than 11,000 ducats for this wonderful product of the bookmaker's art, but the offer was refused.

A curious feature of the history of this book is that while the English arms are inscribed on its cover it is confidently held that the volume has never been in England.

The Puzzle.

"I should like you to understand, sir, that poets are born," exclaimed a writer of verse to an editor who had received him coolly.

"I understand that thoroughly," the editor replied. "But why? That's what bothers me."

Hennequin's Infant Tablets

Save Babies' Lives. For Babies and Small Children. (Made in France.)

Dr. Hennequin's Infant Tablets saved our little girl's life. Three doctors said she could not live. The Tablets cured her.—MR. E. R. McBRIDE, Napanee, Ont.

My baby was so weak from sickness that he could hardly walk. We thought he would die. We could find nothing to help him. I was given a sample package of three Hennequin Tablets; we used them; I saw a change at once. We secured the Tablets and our baby improved every day, and is now a bright, fat, good natured boy; you could not believe he was the same child. They certainly cured my baby and saved his life. I believe them to be the best Tablets ever sold for babies. Mothers if your babies are not well take my advice and try these Tablets.—MRS. JAMES RIDDELL, Barrydale, Ont.

We have hundreds of such letters. If the Tablets were not what you need we would not offer to give them away and prepay them. If your baby is not well send for trial package. Hennequin Tablets have the letter "H" stamped upon them—this is your guarantee. All dealers, 25c per package, or 5 for $1.00 sent postpaid to any address.

DEATH OF MRS. R. S. FORNERI AT KINGSTON.

Some three weeks ago, while attending a meeting of the executive of the diocesan board of the Woman's Auxiliary of which she was treasurer, Mrs. R. S. Forneri, who had not been feeling very well, was taken ill and was compelled to leave the meeting and go home. Her illness rapidly developed into pneumonia, and later typhoid symptoms showed themselves and the patient's condition caused great anxiety. However, the skilful nursing of Miss Florence and Miss Kate Forneri brought such improvement that hopes for recovery were raised high, and even on Thursday there was no thought of the sudden call which came at half-past twelve on Friday last.

Mrs. Forneri literally died in harness and has been the victim of overwork. A few short weeks ago she, with her family, moved into the pretty home Rev. R. S. Forneri had built for them on Alfred street, but all through the extra work entailed by moving and settling, she abated not one atom of her work in the church. For some months she has played the organ in St. Luke's, where Mr. Forneri has been the beloved rector for about four years, and has been very busy preparing the statement for the annual meeting of the W. A. in Brockville this week—an exceedingly wearying task.

Mrs. Forneri was the daughter of the late Samuel Scobell Phippen, and was born in Paris, Ont. Twelve years ago she was married in St. James' church, to the Rev. Mr. Forneri, then rector of St. Alban's church Adolphustown, the beautiful church, which he was instrumental in having built to the memory of the U. E. Loyalists. She was very much beloved there, and in the parish of Merrickville, where Mr. Forneri was for a few years before coming to St. Luke's. A woman of a singularly sweet and strong disposition, she was a gentle leader in all forms of church activity, and made her home an attractive place to all who entered it. She had a sweet voice, and for many years has used it in the praises of the church—on earth, and it is only impossible to think of her as now joining happily in the songs of the church in Paradise. Her serene presence will be much missed every where and her place it will be found impossible to fill. Besides her husband and his family of two sons and three daughters, Mrs. Forneri has left a sister, Mrs. Edward Phippen, Conway, to grieve for her loss.

DIES OF PARALYSIS.

Watertown, N. Y., Standard.

Isaac B. Lucas, one of the oldest and best known country butchers in the county, died at his home at Field Settlement, following a stroke of paralysis which he suffered Monday while at the dinner table. He was in his seventy-fifth year.

Mr. Lucas was born in Moscow, Ont., December 30th, 1835. He came to the United States in 1865 and took up his residence at Reed Settlement in the town of Hounsfield near Adams where he lived for eight years. Then he moved to Field Settlement where he purchased a house in which he resided up to the time of his death. Mr. Lucas had always followed the occupation of a butcher. There beat within the breast of Isaac B. Lucas as kind a heart as man ever possessed. He had a host of friends whom he made through being accommodating.

He leaves two sons, John W. Lucas and George Lucas of this city; three brothers, C. N. Lucas, of Selby, Ont., Canada, and Joseph B., of Moscow and Dr. D. F. Lucas of Brooklyn; eight sisters, Mrs. Mercy Pringle of Napanee Ont., Mrs. Hannah Irish, of Yarker,

POISON IVY CURE.

A writer in "The Emergency Service" says: "Ragged milkweed will cure oak or ivy poison. This fact should be generally known by all who love to roam the woods. Being in the woods nearly all the time, I used to be bothered every season, getting poisoned two or three times every season. I learned of the milkweed cure accidentally, as I would rub the itching places with all kinds of shrubs and weeds until one day I let the juice of a milkweed run on some of the ridges on my hands and noticed that it dried up the blisters and stopped all itching. Since then I have tried this remedy in many difficult cases and at all stages, and it has invariably cured every case. I have had to cure some people two or more times before they could believe in the milkweed, as they were using other things at the time the milkweed juice was applied."

A Marvelous Invention

A gas range that can be changed to a coal range in three seconds

"Made in Canada"

The Champion Interchangeable can be changed from a gas range to a coal or wood range in three seconds. There isn't a single bolt to remove or a screw to turn. The operation is so easy a child can do it.

In natural gas districts, where gas is liable to fail any time, the owner of the Champion always has a good coal range to rely on. No other range like the Champion—the most convenient range in the world. Takes the place of two ranges (gas and coal), thus saving room in the kitchen.

PROPOSALS BY PROXY.

The Advantage a Chinaman Has in Case of a Rejection.

Dr. Isaac T. Headland, a resident of Pekin for many years, throws a new light on the new women of China in The Travel Magazine. Taking up the relations between the sexes and especially the Chinese method of getting a wife, the writer repeats a conversation with a young Chinaman who had recently become engaged to a Chinese maiden with whom he had never spoken.

"We students have a very great advantage over the old Chinese method of finding a wife and getting engaged," said my Celestial friend.

"What do you mean?" I inquired. "Well, you see by the old Chinese method a man can never see his wife until she is brought to his home unless he can bribe the middleman to allow him to stand on the street corner and see her pass by in a cart."

"And what advantage do you have?" "We see the girls in church," he answered. "They also can see us. We have sisters in the girls' school, they have brothers in the college, and when we go home during vacation we can learn all about each other."

"This is an advantage." "In my judgment," he continued, "we have a better method than even you foreigners have."

"How is that?" "Well, you see," he continued, "after we have selected the lady we want we can have a middleman go and ask her for us, while you have to go and ask the lady yourself."

"But," I objected, "we can get so much better acquainted by our method."

"Yes, that's true," he admitted, "but doesn't it make you awfully angry if you ask a girl to marry you and she refuses?"

It was necessary to admit that there were advantages in the middleman method which had never occurred to me, and, while I was not ready to acknowledge that his new found method was better than mine, I could still see that the force which brought it about was bringing woman out of her seclusion and placing her on a level with her brother and her future husband.

A Story of Cervantes.

Cervantes once gave a proof that his generosity was fully equal to his genius. In the early part of his life he was for some time a slave in Algiers, and there he devised a plan to free himself and thirteen of his fellow sufferers. One of them traitorously revealed the design, and they were all taken before the dey of Algiers, who promised them their lives on condition that they revealed the contriver of the plot.

"I was that person," at once cried Cervantes. "Save my companions and let me perish alone."

The dey, struck by his intrepidity, spared his life, allowed him to be ransomed and permitted him to go home.

Waste of Food on Big Liners.

As to food waste the most extraordinary is perhaps found on the big liners that carry three classes of passengers, says The London Chronicle. You might imagine that the elaborate dishes prepared for the saloon would be passed down from class to class and that the poorer would eat of the crumbs that are carried from the rich man's table. Not a bit of it. The second class would resent a "menu" that does not go round, and even the steerage passengers would quarrel if the fare were not the same for all. And so the big liners pitch good food into the ocean.

3,000 YEARS AGO THE EGYPTIANS CURED DISEASE WITH FRUIT

To-day, Canadians Are Doing It With "Fruit-a-lives"

—The Famous Fruit Medicine

We are apt to consider the age we live in as the most wonderful age that the world has ever known. It is, in many respects. Yet the ancients surpassed us in some things. Engineers of our 40-story sky-scrapers still marvel at the massive pyramids and the sphinx. So, too, the Egyptian physicians of 3,000 years ago, used fruit juices as a medicine for treating blood trouble, liver and kidney disease, and stomach weakness. Their method of mixing fruit juice as a medicine, is also one of the lost arts. A well known Canadian physician, however, perfected a method of utilizing fruit juices, which is one of the greatest discoveries of modern medical research.

"Fruit-a-lives" is the natural cure for Chronic Constipation, Biliousness, Indigestion, Torpid Liver, Kidney Disease, Pain in the Back, Bad Complexion, Rheumatism, Nervousness, Headache and Neuralgia.

FINISHED MAN OF THE WORLD.

Cardinal Merry del Val Possesses the Charm of Perfect Manners.

If not in diplomacy, at any rate in learning, manners and physical appearance Cardinal Merry del Val is an ideal prelate, writes Walter Littlefield. He works harder than anybody in the Vatican and has a precise, rapid manner in going through an immense amount of business. Every morning he has a half hour's conference with the Pope; every evening he receives all visitors who believe they have information which may be of value to the Pope or papacy. Merry del Val listens, makes notes, and politely dismisses them. Twice a week, Tuesday and Friday, he receives the ambassadors of the Catholic powers. The following description of his person, given by the Vicomte de Colleville, is suggestive:

"His figure is tall, slight, and graceful. He has a large forehead, a mouth with an amiable smile, and large, black eyes, which give to his expression something of sweetness and sincerity. From all his person there emanates a perfume of exquisite distinction—the charm and seduction of perfect manners. The sound of his voice is harmonious and his conversation brilliant and captivating. In a word, he is a finished man of the world."

Although the cardinal secretary of state has an apartment situated in the oldest and most beautiful part of the Vatican, neither his work nor his pleasures are confined to these precincts. At No. 11, in the Via della Valtellina, outside the Portese Gate, there is a rose-colored villa with high walls and spacious vineyards. It formerly belonged to the nuns of the Sacred Heart; it is now the playground of Merry del Val. There he entertains his social friends. They play bowls, sup in the open, or swing. Yes, the papal secretary of state actually has a swing at his villa and he is very fond of it.

He is also fond of automobiling, and often motors from his villa to the

Backache, Headache Internal Pains.

"If every suffering woman would take Peruna, they would soon know its value and never be without it."

MRS. JOSEPH LACELLE, 121 Bronson St., Ottawa East, Ontario, Canada, writes:

"I suffered with backache, headache and dragging pains for over nine months, and nothing relieved me until I took Peruna. This medicine is by far better than any other medicine for these troubles. A few bottles relieved me of my miserable half-dead, half-alive condition."

"I am now in good health, have neither ache nor pain, nor have I had any for the past year."

"If every suffering woman would take Peruna, they would soon know its value and never be without it."

Dyspepsia and Indigestion.

Mrs. Joseph Beaudoin, 59 Rue St. Olivier, Quebec, P. Q., Can., writes:

"Peruna is wonderful for indigestion. I eat whatever I want and no longer feel any oppression. Having had dyspepsia for a long time and having tried various other remedies, I decided to try Peruna and with the fourth bottle of it I was perfectly cured."

THE GENIUS OF MENELIK.

Emperor of Abyssinia a Wonderful Man From Every Point of View.

"It is chiefly as a statesman that Menelik proved himself a remarkable man," writes a Belgian explorer who has spent much time in Abyssinia, and who has many interesting personal impressions of the Emperor Menelik. "After insuring his country's independence by defeating the Italians at Adowa in 1896, he at once set about organizing his kingdom on the lines of western civilization. Abyssinia was then a semi-barbarous power, on a level with European nations in the middle ages. But owing to

"For this reason I recommend it to all those who are suffering with that terrible malady, dyspepsia. I hope that all who are afflicted in this way will take Peruna and Manafin as I did."

Chronic Nasal Catarrh.

Mr. Chas. H. Stevens, 122 Sixteenth St., Detroit, Mich., writes:

"It affords me great pleasure to testify to the merits of Peruna as a remedy for catarrh."

"I suffered for some time with chronic nasal catarrh, but after five months treatment during which time I used seven bottles of Peruna I am pleased to say that I am entirely well, there not being the slightest trace of catarrh left."

"Peruna is without a doubt, in my mind, the greatest remedy known for catarrh."

Weak, Tired Feeling.

Miss Marie A. Lesser, 928 W. 30th St., Chicago, Ill., Worthy Secretary I. O. G. T., writes:

"I am glad to give a good word for Peruna, and I hope that all who see this who are troubled with systemic catarrh as I was for years, will profit by it."

"I had tried many remedies, but none did more than give me temporary relief, and some did not even do that."

"I took Peruna at the suggestion of a friend, and was more than pleased and surprised at the results."

"I am now perfectly well and strong. That weak, tired feeling has left me, and I feel like a different person entirely."

The Slavery of Disease.

It is wonderful how many women in Canada and the United States have been practically made new again by the use of Peruna.

Not the victims of any organic disease, but just a half-dead and half-alive condition.

Miserable, dragging pains that keep a woman always from doing her best work, from being her best self. Cross and petulant, perhaps. Maybe even a slattern in her household, just because her health is continually below par. She never feels quite right. She gets the reputation of being sullen, or morbid, or ill tempered.

Her trouble is not a moral one at all, it is simply a physical one. Make such a woman well and she immediately becomes transformed into a new being mentally.

This is exactly what Peruna has done for a multitude of cases.

English. He was a trained lawyer, and personally presided over the sittings of the Supreme Court of his empire. He was a great lover of books, and took particular pride in his library of 10,000 volumes in his palace. During the latter years of his reign he made a thorough study of finance, for which he had a natural bent. After some successful speculations on the Paris Bourse he extended the range of his operations to the United States, and invested heavily in American securities.

The World's Largest Crab.

The gigantic Japanese crab, measuring twelve feet, is probably the largest crustacean in the world. It is a type of the spider crab, which inhabits the waters of the group of islands forming the empire of Japan. The body portion is the size of a half bushel measure, while its two great arms, or "feelers," could easily encircle the figure of a man. Its eight

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

The Siamese Topknot.

A Siamese child, whether boy or girl, wears its hair in a little topknot until it has attained the age of eleven or twelve years. On reaching this age the topknot cutting ceremony takes place. The child is dressed in its best, and amid much rejoicing of relatives and friends the topknot is cut, one lock at a time. The head is then completely shaved by the priests. All guests invited to the ceremony bring presents, usually money, which is carefully invested for the child by its parents or guardians. A young prince or princess will sometimes receive as much as $25,000 in presents at his or her topknot cutting ceremony, while a poor child may get $10 or $15.

A Variation.

"Sir," says the anxious suitor, "your daughter has preferred me to you. I—er—that is—you know—I have proposed to her."

"Proposed to her, have you?" dryly observes the father. "Well, I thought she had learned something by this time. And you ought to hesitate a good deal before engaging yourself to marry her. You know she has been divorced four times."

"Yes, sir. But I—I can assure you, sir, that I can provide her with the alimony she has been accustomed to in case our marriage should be a failure."

Menelik. "After insuring for our country's independence by defeating the Italians at Adowa in 1896, he at once set about organizing his kingdom on the lines of western civilization. Abyssinia was then a semi-barbarous power, on a level with European nations in the middle ages. But owing to Menelik's energetic policy rapid strides were made toward civilization. Menelik was greatly helped in his task by the Swiss engineer Lig, whom he had appointed his chief adviser.

"After abolishing the feudal law still existing in the empire and emancipating the slaves, Menelik established a thoroughly up-to-date system of free compulsory education. As a result, education will, in another generation, be as general in Abyssinia as in many European countries.

"Menelik was as skilled a diplomat as a statesman. His defeat of Italy had not removed all danger from outside. The country's rapid development had, on the contrary, aroused the covetousness of other powers. Neither England nor France, not to mention Russia, likewise sought to be Abyssinia's protector under pretext of the similarity between the Russian and Abyssinian Churches. Finally Germany attempted to wield commercial influence in Menelik's dominions, as the best means to pave the way for eventual political influence.

"Menelik at length succeeded in bringing about an agreement between France, England and Italy by which Abyssinia's independence was fully guaranteed. It is fortunate that this agreement was reached, for otherwise Menelik's death might have brought about international complications.

"Menelik was a fine-looking man, in spite of his smallpox marks; he had a splendid forehead and a very winning smile. He had a high conception of his duties as a sovereign, and I have had several personal proofs of his kindness during my various sojourns in Abyssinia.

"Menelik was well educated and extremely versatile. He was a good linguist, speaking French, Italian and largest character in the world. It is a type of the spider crab, which inhabits the waters of the group of islands forming the empire of Japan. The body portion is the size of a half bushel measure, while its two great arms, or "feelers," could easily encircle the figure of a man. Its eight arms, or legs, resemble huge bamboo poles and are extremely elastic, and if strung into one line they would reach to the top of a four storey apartment building. One of the extraordinary peculiarities of this crab is the faculty of assuming a disguise by affixing pieces of seaweed and sponges to the body.

Pleasure of Wisdom.

"Your boy likes to go to school better than he used to," said the relative.

"Yes," answered Mr. Bligh. "He's getting old enough to enjoy learning a lot of things—that he can come home and dazzle me with his superior knowledge."

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

The Siamese Topknot.

A Siamese child, whether boy or girl, wears its hair in a little topknot until it has attained the age of eleven or twelve years. On reaching this age the topknot cutting ceremony takes place. The child is dressed in its best, and amid much rejoicing of relatives and friends the topknot is cut, one lock at a time. The head is then completely shaved by the priests. All guests invited to the ceremony bring presents, usually money, which is carefully invested for the child by its parents or guardians. A young prince or princess will sometimes receive as much as $25,000 in presents at his or her topknot cutting ceremony, while a poor child may get $10 or $15. —Wide World Magazine.

A Variation.

"Sir," says the anxious suitor, "your daughter has preferred me to you. I—er—that is—you know—I have proposed to her."

"Proposed to her, have you?" dryly observes the father. "Well, I thought she had learned something by this time. And you ought to hesitate a good deal before engaging yourself to marry her. You know she has been divorced four times."

"Yes, sir. But I—I can assure you, sir, that I provide her with the alimony she has been accustomed to in case our marriage should be a failure."

It is intended to be applied with a piece of muslin or linen, or it may be applied and allowed to dry in. It affords very prompt relief for pimples, blotches, discolorations, ringworm, acne, tetter, barbers' itch, ulcers, insect bites, nettle rash, hives, sores and wounds.

Rexall Eczema Ointment relieves itching and irritation of the feet. It is ideal for the treatment of children who are tormented with itching, burning and disfiguring skin diseases. Italian justice is slow and none too sure; but it appears to have dealt competently, at last, with the Countess Tarnovska and her associates, whose ten weeks' trial at Venice for murder has just ended in conviction. The countess, an astounding product of Russian "civilization," possessed a magnetic charm and began to exercise it early. She eloped at 17. Her husband disappointing her ideals, she took up with a relative of his, Count Borgetski. The husband, not the intruder, was acquitted of murder, and divorced his wife. She next fascinated her lawyer, who deserted his family and career to follow her to Italy. Presently she picked up a young doctor, named Naumoff; later she added a wealthy young noble, Count Kamarovski, to whom she became engaged after he had taken out an insurance policy for $100,000 in her favor. The tragedy followed. Prilukoff and the countess worked on the jealousy of Naumoff, a morbid, weak-willed boy. He shot Kamarovski. This was in 1907. Now the conspirators go to prison—La Tarnovska herself for eight years; Prilukoff, the confederate, for ten; Naumoff, the instrument, for three. There is no death penalty in Italy.

La Tarnovska, who is 30, is armed with a fatal fascination. Only five victims have been named thus far, but there have been dozens of others, and many of them have committed suicide for her. Even at the trial one of the jurymen succumbed to her uncanny influence. To obviate a similar effect among the carabinieri who guarded her in court the watch was changed every few hours. In the patter employed by the emotional Italian public, La Tarnovska is a "fatal woman" and exercises an "hypnotic spell."

Puzzled Italy has had to deal as best she could with a strange group of creatures, products of the land where East meets West and where the mingled passions of both combine to produce abnormal specimens of humanity and baffling psychological enigmas. Perhaps the day is not far distant when this country will have to handle problems of a similar sort from a like quarter.

The application of English law is stringent but tonic. One of the law's provisions requires candidates to furnish full accounts of election expenses. Two recent candidates have failed to do this satisfactorily and have been unseated. The first victim was Sir Christopher Furness, the well-known shipbuilder. Observe where he slipped. He employed a special train to take carriages to the scene

WORSHIP AND ADORATION

This Is That Which Binds Us All About the Life of the Most High

The desire of all nations shall come.—Haggai ii. 7.

Men do not for many centuries and in all lands cherish the same ideals and express them in approximately the same customs unless there is some truth which holds for them all. Under all the superficial differences of men certain common articles of faith are found, certain hopes and central elements of their motives and actions. Beside the great unities of the creeds the many divergencies sink into insignificance.

The unities are not found in words and phrases; the divergencies appear always when you fix your glass on the phrase and letter. They are not found in definitions nor in ceremonies. They are in great underlying ideas, in the essential things of religion. Deep in man's nature they have their place and they mark him universally as a religious being as truly as other signs set him apart from the beasts of the field.

Pride of opinion will inevitably render one blind to any such unities and produce the conviction that all other religions are fundamentally false. That is because such pride focuses attention on some frill in the edifice, some minute piece of architectural detail, and the observer, unable to see farther, imagines that his detail is the whole of the building. Many a deluded soul shuts itself in a tiny turret and calls it the temple of truth.

The great things are common to all. Everywhere men stretch out their hands after

THE LARGER LIFE.

In every one is found the sense of life beyond our own and of the imperfection and incompleteness of ourselves, as though we were but fragments of a greater whole, while to that all embracing life we lift our hearts and pray for a sight of the great face.

The sense of that farther life may be just as deep in a man in the orient as it is in another in the occident; it may be just as clear an indication of great aspiration when the man utters one name as when he frames his prayers with another, it is independent of place or forms of petition. It is humanity seeking after the wholeness of existence.

Everywhere that search is accompanied by a confidence in the possibility of communication with that larger life, the faith that though we cannot trace the channels there are ways of communion. If this life is truly larger than our own, is higher and nearer perfection, it cannot be shut up to itself; it is so near that nothing of ourselves can escape from its presence.

Constantly men grow in the faith that this all embracing life is one from which none would desire to escape, that it is to us as the mother's arms to the child, that it belongs to us, that it is ours normally and beautifully to seek after him, to find him, to love him just as it belongs to the child to know and love his father. Prayer is but love seeking its own.

So men are taking the universe in terms of love and seeking religion as the highest expression of that philosophy, as the interpretation of life at its apex in those terms. We cannot agree on any sort of definitions of the divine; no two men see precisely the same glory; we content ourselves with fragments of a vision, but we do know and agree that here is

GREAT GOODNESS.

Worship and adoration, prayer and communion with the divine, the smoke of millions of altars, and the incense of myriads of prayers are all but shadows of the reality, the fact that the heart of man goes out seeking that larger life, confident of finding not somewhere in the skies but everywhere that which answers to himself that fullness and glory of which his own being is but the beginning and promise.

This is prayer, the prayer that men have been praying through all the generations, the prayer that lifts itself above all petitions, as the mountains above the pebbles; this is the whole race seeking after and coming into the divine fullness. He whose heart does not so go out in longing, he for whom there burn no altar fires of aspiration belongs not to the great company of his brothers.

This is the longing that springs up at the sight of the greatness of nature, that moves us in the solemnity of the forest, that lifts up the heart along with bird song. To this aspiration we need to yield and, whatever words our lips may frame, rejoice to join with all men in seeking that life in which we live and move and have our being.

This is the hope we all dimly cherish for the future, that somehow, being freed from the shackles of these days and this flesh, we shall be able to see that great life and love which we have been calling God, that what all our friends are to us now that and more will that life be to us there.

SENTENCED TO SIBERIA

FIVE RUSSIAN LADS WERE EXILED FOR LIFE.

A Young British Lad Sentenced to Sixteen Months in Fortress.

A remarkable trial has just closed in the Court of the Kremlin at Moscow, where nineteen out of twenty-seven persons accused of treason received various sentences. Among those sentenced was a British lad named Watson, who received sixteen months in a fortified place; another prisoner, a consumptive girl of 18, was sentenced to a year in a fortress; five Russian lads, one of them a mere schoolboy of 16, were sentenced to Siberia for life; a certain Yermakoff, a man apparently in the last stages of consumption, received the same sentence.

The conviction of these persons is considered by the authorities a great victory for the secret police. The actual evidence is twofold: It shows that some of the prisoners were in the habit of meeting to discuss political affairs; also, certain letters were found upon them showing that they were in communication with the leaders of the Social Revolution. These letters, however, were

HARDLY INCRIMINATING.

But with this basis the Russian secret police has in two years built up a structure of circumstantial evidence consisting of implications and conclusions upon which the logic of the counsel for the defence had no effect.

It seems that two years ago Yermakoff, wishing to be revenged on a man named Kvartalnoff, informed the police that the latter was a Revolutionist. Both Yermakoff and Kvartalnoff were arrested, and, under what they declared at the trial to be torture, confessed to entertaining a political organization of twenty-seven persons at their house. These twenty-seven persons were shadowed by the police, their domiciles ransacked, and certain of them were arrested.

Among the prisoners were three girls, one of them being an Armenian, Miss Mauradoff, whose father is a Councillor of State. In her possession were discovered affectionate letters from the lately denounced agent, Mme. Shoutchevsky-Courngross, hoping to see her at the Central Social Revolution Committee. Fashionable society was horrified to hear that the son of Admiral Jakovlev, who is considered likely to become Minister of Marine, was also arrested. In this way the police soon collected and threw into prison seventeen "suspects." To complete the number it was necessary to have ten more. Hence they hit on the very simple plan of arresting fifteen persons among candidates have failed to do this satisfactorily and have been unseated. The first victim was Sir Christopher Furness, the well-known shipbuilder. Observe where he slipped. He employed a special train to take carriages to the scene of action for the conveyance of voters—but that was allowed. He used local "guides" to accompany automobiles in the work of getting the voters out—but that was passed. He used his secretary and some of his firm's clerks as agents without charging their services in the electoral account—but the judges permitted even that. Yet when a business associate organized a parade of miners from outside, paid the railroad fares and provided badges and meal tickets, the line was drawn. The judges regarded the proceeding as an act of intimidation, and when, on top of that, the cost of the parade was omitted from the candidate's accounts, Sir Christopher found himself down and out.

The other victim was Captain Guest, private secretary to Winston Churchill and son-in-law of Henry Phipps of Pittsburg, Penn. Mr. Phipps, rather than damage his own automobiles, hired eight and placed them at Guest's disposal. Thus he became, in the eye of the law, Guest's agent, and the automobiles should have figured in the candidate's expense account. But the item was omitted, and the candidate was unseated.

WEIGHT OF CARS.

Dining Car Tips Scales at 140,000 Pounds.

Perhaps you don't know that the heaviest of all cars in a transcontinental limited train is the dining car. But it is, ordinarily, by about 10,000 or 15,000 pounds. Between the car construction and the necessary kitchen equipment and ice-box contents, a full size standard dining car tips the scales at 140,000 pounds when ready to make its customary division run. Therefore, on the principle that in case of collision a passenger is safer in the strong heavy coach in the center of a vestibuled passenger train, the dining car is a good place to remain in.

A sixteen section sleeping car may weigh from 110,000 to 125,000 pounds, while the buffet-library car comes next in weight at 107,000 pounds. The baggage car weighing 85,000 pounds may be the lightest in a train, but the postal car next to it weighs an average of 103,000 pounds. A reclining chair car is full weight at 87,000 pounds, while the ordinary passenger coach weighs 93,000 pounds.

With a locomotive and tender weighing 260,000 pounds, one may guess by these figures pretty closely to the enormous weight of some of the through modern railway trains of seven cars.

And more married men would make fools of themselves if their wives would let them

INTERNATIONAL LESSON, JUNE 12.

Lesson XI. The Canaanitish Woman, Matt. 15. 21-28. Golden Text, Matt. 15. 28.

Verse 21.—Went out thence—From Capernaum. The fact that he withdrew in the face of danger has been criticized as cowardly. But his work was far from "finished," and he was unwilling to expose himself needlessly to the murderous onslaughts of the ruling class.

22. A Canaanitish woman—The people of Phoenicia, at this time a Roman province of Syria, were descendants of the Canaanites, the sinful and idolatrous race which the Israelites had set out to exterminate upon entering the promised land. To the Jews, therefore, they were abhorrent as more than ordinarily unclean.

Have mercy upon me—She evidently realized that her chance of success with a Jew was slender indeed. In this respect the story is in marked contrast to the one immediately following, which we have already studied. The multitudes had but to range themselves before him to find endless compassion, while this girl can get relief only after the persistent clamor of an agonized mother. The difference is between the dogs of heathenism and the children of Israel, and serves to teach the disciples that the children have a prior claim and must first be filled.

Thou son of David—Twice we have had this phrase (Matt. 9. 27; 12. 23), but both times from the lips of Jews. People from this district were among those that thronged Jesus at the Sea of Galilee (Mark 3. 8). It would be easy for her, therefore, to hear of both the royal descent and miraculous power of Jesus.

Daughter—He vexed with a demon. See Word Studies for March 23.

23. He answered Matthew's account is worked out in more dramatic form than Mark's. There are four appeals, each offset by "he answered." To the woman's first appeal, he answered not a word. The appeal of the disciples "he answered" by raising the claims of the lost sheep of the house of Israel. Her second appeal "he answered" by contrasting the children with the dogs. Her final appeal "he answered" by praising her and granting what she asked. Mark mentions only two of the appeals, and, further, seems to imply that the encounter took place in a heathen house.

Send her away—They wanted him to do what she asked and then dismiss her. This is evident when, in his answer, he shows why he cannot do as she asks. But, though they did not want her to be peremptorily gotten rid of, their reason for wishing her request granted (she crieth after us), is thoroughly selfish.

24. Sent . . . unto the lost sheep—While the disciples cared not for the woman but only for themselves, this reply of Jesus veils a genuine, but-pent-up, compassion for the woman. He must act in accordance with the mission given him of the Father. Already he had charged them to remember that the stray sheep of Israel had prior rights (Matt. 10. 6), and now he must insist that for the present a broader work is impossible. If, through the Jews, the kingdom is to be made accessible to all men, then the work must not be choked at its source by neglect of the Jews.

25.—But she came—Matthew implies that the first encounter took place while Jesus and his disciples were on the way. As Mark omits the first two appeals, his confining the woman's efforts to the house indicates that at this point in Matthew's narrative we are to think of the company as coming to their lodging and the woman, undaunted by the first rebuff, following.

Worshipped him—Perhaps Matthew (who uses this word repeatedly) does not mean here anything more than that special reverence which one would pay to a kingly person preparatory to asking an unusual favor. In Mark and Luke it is a rare word, but common enough in John, who seems to use it always of the worship of a divine Person.

Lord, help me—She does not repeat her sorrow, for he knows already. This is the persistency of faith. Chrysostom (A. D. 375) says beautifully: "It was a piteous spectacle, to see a woman crying with so much feeling, and that woman a mother, and praying for a daughter, and that daughter in such evil case."

26. He answered—This is not merely a refusal but a stern refusal. To refer to the well-known Jewish distinction, between themselves as children and those of differing religion as dogs, was to repeat his former reason and to give it added harshness. But, two things seem to soften this harshness. One is omitted by Matthew, but recorded by Mark, "Let the children first be filled," implying that later there will be bread for all. Then, this word "dogs" as used here by Jesus is not the severe opprobrious epithet so commonly flung about the East ("Dog of an infidel"), but the softer, domesticated diminutive, "doggies." Substitute "household pets" for "dogs," and the answer really becomes almost a bit of pleasantry.

27. But she said—In his use of the word "doggies" she sees at once a reason why he should answer her request. She accepts the position of a family dog, acknowledging the current distinction between Jew and heathen. But such animals belong to the household, and, without depriving the children of anything that belongs to them (her masters), he may throw her the crumbs of his bounty.

28. Woman, great is thy faith—Mark attributes the concession of Jesus to her wit. She had both. With doglike pertinacity she had surpassed even the children in trust. And, with ready wit, she had turned the Master's reason for refusing her into a reason for helping her.

Be it done—"He joyfully allows himself to be worsted in argument." Attention is called to the comparison of his praise of the faith of heathen woman and a heathen man in the first Gospel, with his manifestation of his Messiahship to her. It was necessary to have ten more. Hence they hit on the very simple plan of arresting fifteen persons among on the Sparrow Hills, on the ridiculous charge that they had assembled to hold a meeting of the Social Revolutionary Committee of East Moscow workmen. Three of these had to be released, one because he was a West Moscow workman. Eight were liberated on bail after being kept four months in prison. The relationship of the twenty-seven was linked up by the police, and they were all thrown pell-mell into one imposing trial.

In spite of the fact that the British Consul at Moscow made a formal plea in favor of his fellow-countryman and Watson's counsel tore the evidence against him into tatters, the court would not admit that the young Englishman was innocent. His sentence of sixteen months, however, will only amount to four, as he has already spent a year in prison. His whole connection with the charge consists in the fact that he knew, socially, certain prisoners and that his arrest was made on account of his resemblance to a man named Stanislaw, who was known to be a member of the gathering entertained by Yermakoff and Kvartalnoff.

Watson is a tall, athletic youth of twenty, with a handsome and typically English face. His father, who is now dead, settled in Russia and married a Russian lady. The young fellow's grandparents live in Glasgow.

"A TRASHY TRINKET."

Pearl Necklace Worth $15,000 Found in Button Box.

A member of a well-known aristocratic French family, while stopping for a few days at a hotel in the Rue de la Paix, Paris, discovered that her $15,000 pearl necklace had disappeared from her room. A messenger boy was suspected. He admitted his guilt, but said that he had given the necklace to his mother. The latter, when questioned, expressed astonishment that so much trouble should be taken for a "trashy little trinket," and said she had given it to her daughter-in-law. The younger woman also seemed surprised that the "string of glass beads" should interest the police. She had given them to her little daughter, who, finding the necklace too large, had taken about half the beads off. These were found in a box containing an assortment of buttons, hooks and eyes, etc. The owner of the necklace was so pleased with its recovery that she would not prosecute the family, but the boy has been discharged.

HIS ALTERNATIVE.

Even at the tender age of four little Bennie was considering his future occupation. "Mamma," he said, "when I'm a man, I'm going to have a waggon and drive around collecting ashes."

"Why, Bennie," exclaimed his mother in horror, "mamma doesn't want her little boy to be an ashman."

"Well, then," replied Bennie with a very self-sacrificing air, "I suppose I could collect swill."

HOME.

STRAWBERRIES.

Sun Cooked Strawberries.—Pick over berries, carefully select sound ones and place others aside for jam. Weigh fruit and sugar as for preserves and add enough water to sugar to dissolve; cook syrup and when boiling hard drop in berries carefully. Cook just long enough to thoroughly heat berries; remove from fire and pour in shallow platters and dishes; set on table or bench in bright sunshine for two or three days, or until juice is thick as desired; cover with mosquito netting and when done place in jars and seal tightly.

Strawberry Hint.—If strawberries are washed carefully before they are hulled, their juice will not gather in the bottom of the dish in which they are placed. Berries can be kept in this way for a day and a half without a bit of the juice leaving the fruit.

Strawberry Shortcake.—Sift together two cupfuls of flour, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one teaspoonful of salt. Rub one-half cupful of lard in flour and add enough cold water to form soft dough. Divide in two portions, roll out one portion, and place in pan, allowing dough to come half way up side of pan. Roll out remainder of dough, spread with soft butter, and place on first portion. Bake about twenty minutes in a moderate oven. Stem, wash, and drain one quart of berries, add one and a half cupfuls of sugar; crush with potato masher. As soon as cake comes from oven remove top crust, butter both top and bottom crusts, use half the berries between cakes and the remainder for top.

Strawberry Shortcake.—Put in the mixing bowl two and one-half cupfuls of flour, one teaspoonful of salt, three teaspoonfuls of baking powder, two tablespoonfuls of shortening. Mix all together, then add just enough sweet milk to moisten. Divide this dough into two equal parts, roll out both parts to one-half inch thickness, spread butter on each, then lay one part on top of the other and bake. When taken out of the oven it will fall apart, beautiful, flaky and short. Cut berries in half and just before serving mix in a cup or more powdered sugar and put between layers.

Strawberry Cheese.—Line little patty pans with puff paste and fill with uncooked rice; bake in a hot oven; cook in a double boiler until the mixture thickens the yolks of three eggs, the grated rind and juice of half a lemon, one cupful of granulated sugar, and a half a cupful of butter; remove from the fire, and when partially cooled stir in one cupful of crushed strawberries; when cool, fill into the pastry shells and cover with a soft boiled icing. These are delicious, but must be eaten fresh.

Strawberry Nests.—Fill an ice cup one-third full of ice cream; hollow the center, in which place three or four ripe strawberries, previously sweetened, and a little juice; cover with a pyramid of slightly sweetened whipped cream and dust over with ground pecan meats. Maraschino cherries may be used in place of berries. Very laws over the ticking. Another plan is to take the best parts for making sheets for cots and cribs where there are children, saving the very thin parts for dusters.

In the sickroom there is no end to the possibilities of an old sheet. One-half laid across the bed under the patient will serve as a draw sheet. If the sides are sewed together and the sheets cut through the center it will be given a new lease of life.

Twilled sheets, by reason of their softness and substantial weave, make excellent polishing cloths and good undercovering for ironing boards.

A large apron for covering the skirt to be used for bedmaking can be made from half a discarded sheet.

Cutting Vegetables.—Cutting onions, turnips, and carrots across the fiber makes them more tender when cooked.

SALADS.

Golden Dressing.—Pineapple juice, one-half cupful; lemon juice, one-quarter cupful; beaten eggs, two; sugar, one-third cupful. After beating the eggs well add the pineapple juice, lemon juice, sugar, and small pinch of salt. Beat together and cook in double boiler. Let boil about two minutes.

Oil Salad Dressing.—Lemon juice, two teaspoonfuls; olive oil, one-quarter cupful; salt, one-half teaspoonful; water, two teaspoonfuls; eggs, two. Heat together in double boiler, stirring constantly. When it begins to thicken place in cold water and stir until cold.

Fruit Salad.—Yolks four eggs, quarter teaspoonful of paprika, three-quarters teaspoonful of salt, one-half cupful butter, three-quarters cupful milk, one-half cupful pineapple juice from canned fruit, one-half tablespoonful cornstarch, one-half cupful vinegar. Mix and boil until thick. This can be made in the morning. Peel two apples and slice, three bananas, one cupful pineapple that has been drained of all juices, seven grapes (white), halved. When dressing is mixed through fruit, then mix through as much whipped cream as desired; about one pint. Serve on lettuce leaf and garnish with English walnuts and marshino cherries. This serves twelve and is simply delicious.

MEATS.

Substitute for Bacon.—An excellent substitute for breakfast bacon is salted pork. Have the butcher slice it thin, trim and pour boiling water over, letting it stand a few minutes. Drain and wipe dry, sprinkle with a little pepper, roll in flour and fry a light brown. It is preferred to bacon.

Tongue with Tomato Sauce.—Cut cooked corned tongue in slices a little less than one-half inch thick, dip in bread crumbs, egg and crumbs; brown in butter, place on a dish; pour around this sauce; cook one-half can of tomatoes with one onion, two peppers; cook five minutes, strain, add two tablespoonfuls butter, two tablespoonfuls flour cooked together. Salt to taste.

Pork Chops with Lemons.—Grate a small quantity of lemon rind, enough to cover one side lightly, on each chop. Stack them on a plate and let set an hour before cooking. Cook with the lemon still on and you will find them delicious.

and quite hopeless, while others recover most satisfactorily; in the former germs are more virulent and deadly than the pneumococcus allied with it.

Infection in pneumonia was recognized long before we knew the essential germ; it was generations ago, known to be prevalent in certain given houses, barracks, jails, schools; epidemics were recognized; in hospitals direct infection was easily traced. Nurses and doctors seldom succumb to pneumonia, infectious as it is; one among several good reasons for this is that they know precisely what means of prevention they must employ; they do not (or should not) see cases when they might become susceptible by reason of bodily weakness or ill health, and which is a potent factor in the development of any infection.

As has been stated, after the pneumococcus we have to consider predispositions, which in the physician's experience loom up very large indeed. Take, for example, a family of five or six. One or two among them will succumb to pneumonia, while the others will escape. Why don't they all suffer, since in the family relation they must all have been about equally subject to the germinal attack? The reason lies in that the bodies of those who have contracted the disease were predisposed, while in the bodies of those who have escaped the organs and tissues were sufficiently vital to triumph over the infection.

Resistance to the pneumococcus is decreased under various conditions. Children under 6 are very prone to pneumonia; the tendency then diminishes up to the fifteenth year; then for each subsequent decade it progressively increases. Venerable people are very prone to pneumonia and are very likely to die of it; from the forty-fifth year to the sixty-fifth year the death rate per 100,000 is 263; from 65 on it is 733 per 100,000.

The colored man is more likely than the white to suffer. Men are more prone than women, undoubtedly by reason of the greater hardships and exposure the family's breadwinner has to suffer.

The winter months, but especially in those times in winter when the weather is changeable and unsettled—as in December and March—there is likely to be much pneumonia.

COLD AND WET.

especially when the extremities are chilled and wet, predispose decidedly by lowering resistance. The cold alone is not responsible for this; Arctic explorers are amazingly free from such affections as pneumonia, though when they return to civilization they are as likely as any one else to succumb. The reason lies in that the pneumococcus is unknown—as yet—in the rare, clean, pure Arctic air, whereas it is all too prevalent among us.

Taking cold is rarely oftentimes taking heat; there is here at bottom a disturbance of the bodily equilibrium. Chilling of the skin brings about a disturbance of the normal equilibrium of the general circulation; some organs—as the lungs—will have an excess of blood, while elsewhere there will be an anemia, a depletion. And this instability disturbs and decreases

REEKING WITH SEDITION

EUROPEAN CITIES WHICH ARE PLAGUE-SPOTS.

Spain is Not the Only Country Where There is Great Unrest.

Barcelona has for some years had a notorious name as a very hotbed of Anarchists, Nihilists, and Seditionists, and unrest; and it must be confessed the Spanish town, which has recently been the scene of so much trouble, following the execution of Ferrer, has well earned its unenviable renown.

But there are other "Barcelonas" in Europe, almost, if not quite, as full of restless folk as is the Spanish city on the shores of the Gulf of Lyons. And most countries have one or more of these plague-spots.

Lately, when the writer landed at Palermo, he saw on the quay a troop of soldiers. They were kept in a sort of big cage, behind iron bars. They were laughing, singing, and jeering, in many cases, at the passers-by. And the said strollers along the quay reciprocated their attentions with interest, so that there was certainly no love lost.

TURBULENT PALERMO.

The soldiers were from an Italian regiment, sent to be ready for use in Palermo if necessary. You may remember that there have been two or three assassinations of important officials in the fair Sicilian city only recently, and your native of Palermo is as continually restless as a bear with a sore ear. The town is simply seething with desperadoes and members of various terrible societies, and you need never be surprised any morning, to read serious news from beautiful Palermo.

Hardly second to Barcelona itself, and certainly not to Palermo, for its constant unrest and upheavals is Lisbon, surely one of the fairest cities on earth! Its situation is glorious, its environment lovely beyond description, its main streets are among the finest in the world. Yet this town is ever reeking with sedition and people who may break out any morning quite unexpectedly; with such terrible, staggering results as startled the world in January, 1908.

France always has to keep its eye on Marseilles. Here, again, it is difficult to say why this fine and flourishing port, facing the delightful Mediterranean, should be such a very hotbed of men whose hand is ever against society and their fellows. The least cause, the slightest spark, and Marseilles is on fire in a minute.

ITALIAN UNREST.

Italy is troubled terribly with the unrest always simmering at both Rome and Naples. The extraordinary ascendancy and dreadful power of such societies as the Mafia, the Camorra, and others, have made the terrors of Rome and Naples almost as full of fear to the State officials and foreign visitors as they are to the humbler instruments of the vengeance of those societies in Italy.

SCOURGE OF PNEUMONIA

CAUSE AT TIMES OF MORE DEATHS THAN CONSUMPTION

Aggravates Other Diseases — The Young and the Aged are Most Susceptible.

The death rate of pneumonia is really dreadful; sometimes it exceeds even that of consumption. The difference is that in pneumonia the very young and the aged succumb most readily, while consumption gets its greatest harvest from those in the prime of life, says the Dietetic and Hygienic Gazette.

Pneumonia, or lung fever, was formerly considered to affect only the lungs, but of recent years we have found it to be a general infection, such as develops from the growth and multiplication of disease-engendering germs.

In pneumonia these germs have the lungs for their principal camping ground, though other organs and parts of the body are affected, sometimes even more seriously.

Here, as in all infections, two kinds of causes have to be taken into account: First, the specific cause, the germ; and then the predisposing causes, which weaken the body and so make it congenial soil for the germ to thrive in.

The germ of pneumonia hunts in couples. This germ is fairly resistant to drying and sunshine, when it is embedded in protective sputum, but when dried and powdered an hour's direct sunshine will kill it; it resists diffused sunshine better than direct, for it can live in the former fifty-five days; it has been found in at least 90 per cent. of the cases of pneumonia in which it has been sought.

It is found in the upper air passages—the mouth, the nose, the throat and the bronchial tubes.

EVEN IN THE EYELIDS:

of course the "rusty sputum" of pneumonia patients contains it, and sometimes also even their blood; it persists for weeks or months in the mouths of pneumonia convalescents.

Infection comes usually through inhaling the germs, which get into the lymph and blood channels, and this is why pneumonia is a general and not a local disease. So besides being responsible for lobar pneumonia the pneumococcus may set up inflammation in many other parts of the body than the lungs—the heart, the spleen, the stomach, the kidneys.

An important consideration just here is that of mixed infection; in many infections, such as pneumonia, a number of different microbes may be found active in addition to the one which is the essential cause. And this mixed infection will oftentimes make fatal a disease which would otherwise not prove so. Thus some cases of pneumonia are very grave indeed equilibrium. Chilling of the skin brings about a disturbance of the normal equilibrium of the general circulation; some organs—as the lungs—will have an excess of blood, while elsewhere there will be an anemia, a depletion. And this instability disturbs and decreases the body's antibacterial activities.

Fatigue very decidedly predisposes the body to pneumonia; men who must work arduously through long hours and in inclement weather are apt to come down with it. Medical men of large practice, who become exhausted through much work-day and night, often succumb by reason of this.

Unhealthy conditions of the upper air passages—"respiratory catarrhs"—tend to pneumonia. There are chronic diseases of the heart, kidneys and the digestive tract upon which pneumonia is oftentimes superimposed, and then there is likely to be a fatal result. Most people, by way, do not die of the disease which has most persistently and most seriously affected them; it is some such "terminal affection" as pneumonia that brings about the end.

INJURIES TO THE CHEST

will frequently predispose to pneumonia; the external wound may be very slight, while the internal injury may be extensive. Alcoholism is an enormously predisposing factor; this is especially so by reason of the dreadful stuff which poor men are apt to consume.

Pneumonia is more frequent in cities than in the country because of the more strenuous life and irregular life in the cities, the germ laden dust, the tenement life, the overcrowding and consequent increased liability to the infection. It is considered that newcomers to cities are less prone to pneumonia than the city born, no doubt because such newcomers have not yet become enervated by city life.

The measures against infection should be very much as in tuberculosis—such measures as the anti-tuberculosis propaganda has popularized. The sputum is disinfected; attendants upon pneumonia cases keep their own mouths and throats very clean by means of dentifrices and gargles; they wash their hands very frequently in disinfectants. After the patient's recovery or removal his room is fumigated, as for any infectious disease; if there have been several cases of pneumonia we had best fumigate the whole house.

At any rate we should clean such rooms with wet cloths instead of by dusting and sweeping. Those who have no occasion had best keep away from pneumonia patients, though there is of course no occasion to be frightened by them as if they had the plague.

Certainly people who are susceptible because of predisposing factors should not unnecessarily expose themselves to infection. Expectations in public places should be prohibited. Immunization against pneumonia, such as is now so effective against diphtheria, is likely to become a successful procedure. In a number of cases it already has proved effective.

"Ah! I've seen some rough times, sir," said an old salt. "Once we was wrecked, and we'd eaten all our provisions. Then we ate our belts, and then the ship turned turtle and we ate her too!"

the terrors of Rome and Naples almost as full of fear to the State officials and foreign visitors as they are to the humbler instruments of the vengeance of those societies in Italy.

There has always been a great horde of half-wild democracy in Rome and Naples which is ever ready to rush forth to loot, plunder, and destroy either property or life; and the two cities never seem to become utterly at peace, or to be thoroughly trusted by the ruler of the State or by visitors.

As for that island which has been well called "The Isle of Unrest"—the notorious Corsica—the writer had proof enough during a recent visit to it that its people have lost none of those qualities which have given their land its name.

Brigands and robbers still flourish within a very few miles of Ajaccio, the capital, and you will not go far through Corsica without soon seeing that you need better protection than the Government can give you if you are to enjoy a quiet frame of mind as regards your safety in the event of any disturbance.

Ajaccio may not be as big as Barcelona, nor as important as Palermo, but it contains more desperate folk than either in proportion to the population.—London Answers.

HER LACK OF JUDGMENT.

Mr. Pembroke's Wife Couldn't Help Him Economize.

"Henrietta," said Mr. Pembroke as he sat down to breakfast, "you've got to cut down on our living expenses. We can't afford it. Here you have bacon and eggs—both very expensive luxuries—to say nothing of real cream or the coffee and maple syrup for the pancakes."

"Well, dear, we can't live on air," Mrs. Pembroke replied.

"I know we can't live on air, but we can live on less expensive things than you've got heaped up on the table here this morning. I told you I was to attend the luncheon which is to be given to-day in honor of Mr. Snigglesy, who has just been appointed consul at Stuttgart, didn't I? That will cost me $3. And to-night I'm to go to the banquet of the Herkimer County Society, which is to cost $4 a plate. I could have worried along very well without any breakfast at all. You ought to think of these things."

"I do think of them; but the children are growing, and they must have wholesome food. Do you expect to attend a banquet or anything to-morrow?"

"Yes, The Mohawk Club has its annual dinner to-morrow night. That will cost me $4. You simply must cut down, somehow. And on the following evening there is to be the installation of the newly elected officers of the Cy Yipps. That will take another five-spot. How do you suppose I'm going to be able to stand it if you keep on spending money for stuff to eat here at home the way you do? Cut down, for heaven's sakes. Don't mind me. I can get along with a little inexpensive gruel. I should think you'd exercise some judgment."

"It's easy for a man to write a long love letter to a woman—if he isn't married to her."

THE MYSTERY CLEARED UP ;

OR, THE HERITAGE OF MADAME YALTA.

CHAPTER VII.

When Maxime awoke next morning the scenes in Rue Jouffroy presented themselves under a new aspect. Now that he had come out from the hubbub and could reason more calmly, he began to extract a few certainties from among all these obscurities.

The marvel of the Rink was not the friend of Borisoff. On this point there was no possibility of mistake. She had directed a plot for the deliverance of Robert de Carnoel, and the plot had succeeded. But by what miracle of address had she come to deceive Borisoff and induce him to bring his prisoner to her house? And who was this Madame Sergeant who showed herself only to vanish immediately, who skated at the Rink like an adventuress, who was enthroned like a great lady in the first boxes at the opera, who supped with a Bertha Verrier, who had at her disposal a house peopled with liveried servants, who exhibited herself one evening in company with a suspicious boyard, and a month after was brought home by the most authenticated of Russian colonels? To all this he was prepared with a reply. The pretended Madame Sergeant could be none other than the agent of the conspirators who had stolen Borisoff's papers, an intimate friend of the thief who had left her hand in the claws of the safe. But if Madame Sergeant were this, what was to be thought of Carnoel? Either he was her lover or her accomplice. This melancholy conclusion forced itself upon Maxime. And in these cases he had betrayed poor Alice; he was unworthy of the love of the girl who perished in believing in his innocence.

"So," thought Maxime, "those who accused the Lord Carnoel were right, and I for my part acted as foolishly as Don Quixote when he undertook to deliver the bandits who were being led to the galleys."

But he could not forget that it was not he alone who had undertaken the defence of his uncle's secretary. The Countess Yalta affirmed vehemently that Robert de Carnoel was the victim of atrocious injustice. She it was who had cast doubts into the mind of Alice just as the poor child had begun to believe in the guilt of her lover. It was she who had fired the zeal of Maxime, who had launched him into a senseless enterprise. Her interest in him drew its inspiration from a feeling of chivalry, a natural propensity to defend the weak and succor the oppressed. But this nocturnal adventure proved that her pity was ill placed. Maxime proposed to relate this history to her and hoped to convert her to more rational views.

He was impatient also to denounce the conduct of the fencing-so—but I remembered your orders and made my visit short."

"Oh," resumed the doctor, laughing, "I shall not scold her. You have proved very agreeable to her and she asserts that distraction will do her more good than my remedies. But it is not of my dear patient I wish to speak with you."

"Of whom, then?" asked Maxime, his curiosity beginning to awaken.

"Of a woman who perplexed you very much six weeks or two months ago. You remember the marvelous brunette whom I pointed out to you at the Rink?"

"Yes, certainly," he replied with some agitation.

"Have you seen her since?"

This unexpected question disconcerted Maxime, but an immediate reply was necessary, and he answered evasively:

"I have seen her once at the theatre."

"And you spoke to her?"

"No, she was in a box with a gentleman."

"A foreigner, was he not?"

"He had that appearance."

The doctor reflected for a moment. Maxime more and more confused by this singular questioning could not long remain silent.

"You know her, then?" he asked, looking with a certain uneasiness at Villagos.

"One of my friends knows her, and he was with her when day before yesterday I passed her in the street."

"And he has told you who she is?"

"Yes, and it is so curious a history that I came expressly to relate it to you. This creature who amuses herself with skating on casters like a simple coquette, and who looks like an Andalusian; this girl with eyes of fire is a Russian and a Russian Nihilist—one of those lunatics whose dream is to abolish everything."

"It is astounding!" cried Maxime, feigning astonishment, though the doctor told him nothing new. "And your friend is sure of his facts?"

"Very sure. You will see, presently, that he is well informed. The evening you escorted her from the Rink did she not take you to a house in Rue Jouffroy?"

"Yes," replied Maxime.

"And when you went next morning to enquire for her the answer was that they did not know her?"

"You know that?"

"No, but I guess it. You were so much excited about this marvel of a beauty that you would not be put off by the first check you received. Moreover, my friend told me that the lady had there a temporary lodging, which she never occupied two nights successively."

"Did your friend tell you why she has returned?"

mately connected with her. He was madly in love with her, but had the courage to separate from her when he discovered that she was an active Nihilist. She does not hide from him, however. In France she incurs little or no risk, and he still possesses a certain influence over her; first, because he knows her secret, and secondly, because toward the end of the liaison he drew her from a very dangerous predicament. Now I am going to explain to you how we shall proceed if you agree to accompany us."

"Gladly. Where shall we meet?"

"Would you object to joining us at midnight in the Champs-Élysées?"

"Not at all."

"Well, from there we will go to the part of the city she lives in. My friend knows the house in which she hides and will know how to make it open to us."

"We will go armed, will we not? It would be more prudent. There is no telling what might happen."

"Armed! why? You fancy the brunette will receive you with a pistol? Make yourself easy; she will take care not to create a disturbance; and as for this M. de Carnoel, he is as anxious as any one to avoid publicity. For my part, I shall take only a cane, and I recommend you to do the same."

"But," said Maxime, after a little hesitation, "this woman may be surrounded with persons who are capable of doing us harm when once we are in her lodging."

"What! you suppose she has domestics in such a place as that?"

"I don't know; but I know she had three or four in her service in Rue Jouffroy."

"These lackeys must have dispersed when she abandoned her house, for she has abandoned it; you are certain of this?" asked Villagos.

"Yes," replied Maxime, with embarrassment.

WHITE CATS MOSTLY DEAF.

Those with Odd Eyes Don't Hear Well—Their Sense of Feeling.

The acuteness of the average cat's sense of hearing is proverbial, but it is a proverb that needs qualifying. For example, many white cats are absolutely deaf, and though the idea may appear absurd at first sight, I am inclined to believe that the color of a cat is associated with its sense of hearing, says a writer in the Scotsman.

I have several times imported Persians, or long haired cats from abroad, but not one white one in the number has been able to hear the slightest sound. Of course I have possessed white cats that could hear, but they have been the exception, and that applies as much to the short hair pet of the fireside as to the aristocratic long hair of the shows. Moreover, I have observed that the white cats dullest of hearing are those with blue eyes.

The cats with orange eyes which I have had could hear quite well, those having odd eyes—that is, one orange and one blue—could hear a little but not well, and those having blue eyes were quite deaf, though all have come from the same litter. All kittens have blue eyes till they are about six weeks old, when the eyes change to their adult or permanent color. But to show

COMPELLED TO ABANDON WORK

A Very Severe Case of St. Vitus
Dance Cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

St. Vitus dance is a common disease in children and is also found in highly strung men and women. The only cure lies in plenty of pure blood, because pure blood is the life food of the nerves. And Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is the only medicine to make this life food because they contain the elements that actually make new, rich, red blood. This statement has been proven over and over again and now from Port Maitland, N. S., comes another remarkable piece of evidence of the power of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills over disease. Mr. Lyndon E. Porter, is one of the best known residents of that town. He suffered from a severe attack of St. Vitus dance, and got no help from medicine until he began using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. He says: "My case was unusually bad. I was compelled to abandon work, I found it impossible to sleep, and night after night would toss about in bed. I was receiving medical attention, but in spite of the careful treatment I gradually grew worse. My limbs jerked and twitched to such an extent that I could not cross the floor without falling or coming in contact with some piece of furniture. I could not raise a glass of water to my lips so badly did my arms and hands tremble and shake. I cannot imagine more severe suffering and inconvenience than one endures who has St. Vitus dance. My father being a druggist, knew of the many cures effected by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and advised me to try them. I did so, and with the most happy results. In less than two months from the time I began the use of the pills I was a well man, and I have not since had the slightest symptom of the trouble."

All over the world Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are making just such cures as Mr. Porter's. They go right down to the cause of the disease in the blood. In this way they have proved in thousands of cases to cure anaemia, headache and backaches, rheumatism, lumbago, neuralgia, nervousness, indigestion, decline and the special ailments of growing girls and women. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

BEAR HUNT IN JAPAN.

Inexperience and Rusty Guns Led Nimrods to Disaster.

It happened on the 18th ult., shortly before sunset, that some surveyors accompanied by laborers, were still surveying a field at Uy-enai in Esashi-gun, Hokkaido, writes a correspondent of the Japan Advertiser.

While engaged in this work a bear made its appearance from a cave near by, and ambling threateningly toward the party sprang upon one of the workmen who was in the act of running away. The tinal adventure proved that her pity was ill placed. Maxime proposed to relate this history to her and hoped to convert her to more rational views.

He was impatient also to denounce the conduct of the fencing-master who had shown himself the ally of Madame Sergent, and had certainly acted without the knowledge of the noble woman in whose service he was engaged.

In the last interview with Madame Yalta, she had clearly explained herself on the subject of the Nihilists and their adherents.

"I have the good fortune not to be a Russian subject," were her words; "I have therefore nothing to do with these people, but I belong by instinct to the party of the prescribed, and am not of that of the eyes and murderers."

But it was not surprising that a husband had betrayed his mistress, and it might even be that Madame Yalta was surrounded, unknown to herself, by scoundrels affiliated with a sect whose dream is universal destruction.

These wretches were known to be everywhere, and to establish themselves from choice where no one suspected they would have the audacity to enter. If the fencing-master, Kardiki, was one of them, as it appeared, he had well chosen his post. The superb mansion of the Avenue de Friedland was a sure asylum where no one would think of looking for a socialist conspirator.

He hastened to dress, and had only put on his overcoat and hat, when his valet presented him the card of a gentleman who asked to see him.

He was about to be excused to the early visitor, when to his great surprise he saw on the card the name of Dr. Villagos.

What could be the Hungarian doctor's object in this visit to a small apartment of Rue de Chateaudun where he had never set foot before? Concluding he had been sent by the countess, he refrained from excusing himself, simply resolving to be very cautious and beware of letting him into his confidence.

The doctor entered smiling. "Dear monsieur," he said, "you must be a little surprised at seeing me so early. I should not have disturbed you at this unusual hour had I not brought you news of a person in whom you are interested."

"The Countess Yalta? How is she? I was sorry to find her suffering yesterday."

"She received you, then?"

Maxime bit his lips. He saw too late that in spite of his sage resolutions he had committed an indiscretion.

"Yes," he said with embarrassment, "she was good enough to do put off the first check you received. Moreover, my friend told me that the lady had there a temporary lodging, which she never occupied two nights successively."

"Did your friend tell you why she has returned?"

"Yes, and it is to speak to you of that, that I came. She arrived there yesterday and is there now."

"Your friend is mistaken. She is not there," said Maxime, heedlessly.

"She was yesterday evening, and unless she can have decamped last night—but prepare yourself to be thunder-struck. Do you know why she has resumed temporary possession of this mysterious abode? That she might receive there one of the accomplices whom you know better than I—your uncle's ex-secretary."

"You see that your dear countess was wrong to interest herself about that young man."

"Good! good!" said the doctor, laughing. "I know she has recommended silence. She is a little distrustful of me because she knows I do not approve her romantic fancies, but she ended by confessing that she had launched you into the insane enterprise of finding this Carnoel. I do not know what you have done, but I am going to aid you with a piece of valuable information. I thing Madame Yalta was wrong to embark you in this foolish expedition, but the evil is done, and I wish only to serve you. She is bent on fishing up this youth who has fallen into the sea; well, we will fish him up together. I shall not be sorry to deliver him from the toils of this worthless woman, which it is in my power to do, and once withdrawn from her, we will facilitate his embarking for America. I suppose you no longer think of reinstating him that he may marry your cousin?"

"Oh, no," said Maxime, "my mind is made up about him."

"Good! we are agreed, then, on one point. It is what we are to undertake at the lady's house that concerns us now; but we must know at what door to knock. These female Nihilists are marvellously skilful in eluding researches—this one especially. We should fail unquestionably if we went to seek for her where she is not, and the check would be irreparable. Now she can be in only one of two houses, either the house in Rue Joffroy or—"

"I affirm that she has left Rue Joffroy."

"Very well, I take your word for it. You assert that she has gone; it would almost seem as if you had assisted in the moving. We have, then, nothing to do but present ourselves at a certain house to which they have transferred their nest."

"Where?"

"This evening, if you will; or rather to-night, for it is just as well we should not be seen entering the house of a woman whose mysterious ways must have attracted the attention of the neighbors."

"Is it like the other?"

"No, it is a lodging meanly furnished in the faubourg St. Honore near St. Philippe du Roule."

"It is very astonishing, and I wonder, above all, that you should be so well informed," said Maxime, to whom a feeling of distrust of the doctor now and then returned.

"Nothing is simpler," said the doctor. "My friend has been irritable and not well, and those having blue eyes were quite deaf, though all have come from the same litter. All kittens have blue eyes till they are about six weeks old, when the eyes change to their adult or permanent color. But to show how widely the permanently blue eyes differs to begin with from other eyes I may say that immediately the eyes of white cats that are to have permanently blue eyes open they will shine bright red in the dark and neither the ephemere kitten blue nor any other color eye does this.

One peculiarity of deaf cats is that they seem to have an aggravated sense of feeling in their feet pads. It is very difficult for a heavy walking animal such as man to approach a deaf cat from behind without giving it warning, and this I attribute to the extreme sensitiveness of the cat's feet, recording the slightest tremor of the ground and so to a certain extent taking the place of hearing. It is a belief held by some country people that white cats do not make good hunters, good mouse or rat catchers even if they do hear. I am inclined to think that there is a foundation for this idea, and I would go further and say that dark colored cats make the best mouse and rat catches because they hear best.

An Always Ready Pill.—To those of regular habit medicine is of little concern, but the great majority of men are not of regular habit. The worry and cares of business prevent it, and out of the irregularity of life comes dyspepsia, indigestion, liver and kidney troubles as a protest. The run-down system demands a corrective and there is none better than Parmelee's Vegetable Pills. They are simple in their composition and can be taken by the most delicately constituted.

Mrs. Johnston—"Oh, professor, I wonder what I could do to improve my daughter's voice?" Distinguished Professor of Music—"Well, I am sure I do not know, unless you try feeding her on canary seed."

Ask for Minard's and take no other.

"That was a great sermon you preached this morning," said the old churchwarden, "and it was well timed, too." "Yes," rejoined the parson, with a deep sigh, "I noticed that." "Noticed what?" asked the puzzled warden. "The timing. Several of the congregation looked at their watches frequently," answered the good man, with another deep sigh.

ISSUE NO. 22-10.

pan Adviser. While engaged in this work a bear made its appearance from a cave near by, and ambling threateningly toward the party sprang upon one of the workmen who was in the act of running away. The man escaped with a lacerated arm and the bear was left victor, the field being cleared of its human occupants in a remarkably brief space of time.

The incident came to the knowledge of some local Nimrods, and some days later bruin was tracked to his lair. One of the gallant hunters fired, but there was something wrong with his gun. Unfortunately it did not go off; that is, it went off but in rather irregular way, the gun being rusty and the powder damp. All these things, however, only served to enrage bruin, who attacked his enemies. The other hunter took the opportunity when the bear's attention was centred upon his companion and fired his gun, but this weapon too was useless.

The bear apparently now had both men at his mercy and in a short time they were lying seemingly lifeless and mangled on the ground. A passing small car carried the vanquished hunters to the nearest village, where one of the men seems to be on the way to recovery under treatment, but the other died of his wounds.

WOMEN ENGINEERS.

Seven Hundred Russian Girls to Enter Profession.

Mlle. M. D. Bandurina, the first Russian lady engineer, told something recently of her entry into her profession. She is quite a young girl. She looks a little overworked, but she has great hopes for the future.

"The beginning was certainly very hard," she said, "but I have already been employed by the chief engineers who are constructing the Ochta bridge over the Neva, and I have obtained some work on the Nicolas Railway. I have to pass a few more examinations and then I shall be recognized as a fully responsible engineer." Mlle. Bandurina's specialty is the drawing of plans and mathematical work. She is not quite sure if a woman's physical strength will suffice for such details of practical engineering as dealing with workmen. But hitherto men have, she says, always been very considerate to her. "There are branches in the engineering profession," she says, "where a woman can do very good work and gain a reputation."

Mlle. Bandurina chose the work because of her special gift for mathematics. "And I have never yet regretted my choice," she says. She is particularly proud that, about 700 young Russian girls are shortly to follow her example, having been trained at Professor Belelubsky's Polytechnic Academy for Women. There are four divisions of the academy—one for engineering, another for electro-technical work, a third for architecture, and a fourth for chemistry. Mlle. Bandurina owes her professional skill entirely to Professor Belelubsky.

A ROMP IN THE DESERT.

How a Company of Travellers Amused Themselves.

The Bedouins of fiction are usually supernaturally grave fellows, who look out on the world with "unfathomable mystery" in their eyes. Quite a different picture is that drawn by Mr. Norman Duncan in "Going Down from Jerusalem." It was a company of travellers—Christian and otherwise—that had stopped for the night. One member had just performed a simple trick for the entertainment of the others. "A feat!" cried Mustafa. "I too, will perform a feat!"

We made a ring in the moonlight and fell silent and watchful, while the old fellow gravely wound his skirt about his middle. An athletic performance, evidently some mighty acrobatic feat of the desert.

"Observe!" said Mustafa. Our attention deepened, and Mustafa, having bowed with much politeness to the company, turned a somersault.

Then restraint broke loose. "Catch me!" shouted the younger khawaja. Here was a familiar game. They reached to seize him; but the younger khawaja leaped from the quick hands of the big muleteer, dodged the catspring of the Sudanese, buffeted Aboosh, overturned the Bedouin, and darted off into the moonlight with a whoop like the shriek of a disappearing locomotive. They were after him in a flash—a yelping, giggling, hallooing, guffawing pack, leaping over the moonlit sand like shadows.

Weelah! but the delight of that pursuit, the triumph of the capture!

"Ring-around-a-rosy"—and the desert fairly groaned from the vigor of the squatting.

"Bull-in-the-ring"—a mad success!

"Crack the whip"—and the climax of earthly joys was achieved.

We put the camel boys on the end of the line; we sent them tumbling head over heels, rolling over the soft sand like rag balls, far into the farther moonlight.

Weelah! but they would be cracked again. And we cracked them, with such joyous fervor that we never expected to see them more.

Mustafa clamored to be cracked. We indulged Mustafa; we put Mustafa where he craved to be, and we gripped hands with a new and nightier grip, and we ran faster and farther, and we turned more abruptly, and we cracked the old gentleman clean out of sight, over the ridge of a sand-drift.

"By Mohammed!" he screamed, returning. "But there is a deep hole in the desert where I alighted."

PAYS TRIBUTE

TO THE GRAND WORK DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS ARE DOING.

Fishermen Regard Them as a Boon to Mankind—Mr. Frank Banfield Tells How They Cured His Backache.

Garnish, Fortune Bay, Nfld., May 23 (Special).—Among the fishermen here, who through exposure to wet and cold are subject to those pains and aches which come from diseased Kidneys, Dodd's Kidney Pills are looked upon as a positive boon to mankind. They are never tired of telling how their Backaches and their Rheumatism vanish before the great Kidney remedy.

Among many others, Mr. Frank Banfield, after years of suffering, has found relief in Dodd's Kidney Pills, and here is what he is telling his friends:—

"I find Dodd's Kidney Pills the best medicine for Backache I have ever used. I only used two boxes and they cured me of Backache I had had for five years. It started through a strain. My father's back also bothered him, and he got some relief from one pill I gave him. They were too precious to give him more. All persons suffering from Backache should use Dodd's Kidney Pills."

Why do Dodd's Kidney Pills cure Backache? Simply because Backache is Kidney ache, and Dodd's Kidney Pills positively cure all Kidney aches and ills. This has been proved in thousands of cases in Canada. If you haven't used them yourself ask your neighbors.

HIS HOBO NAME.

"What is your name?" inquired the kind-hearted woman, as she handed the intellectual-looking tramp a large piece of her best jelly cake.

"Me real name, ma'am," the man replied between his eager bites, "is known only to th' forgotten past; but ever since me gal turned me down, an' her ol' man turned me out, I've went by th' name of 'Gas.'"

A BOY'S HOLIDAYS.

The ardent controversy which has been waging in England and America concerning the best way to dispose of school boys in the long summer vacation has prompted the Grand Trunk Railway System to issue a special publication giving suggestions and practical hints to parents, as to what to do with the school boy during the months of July and August. The vacation camp is one of the solutions and the publication entitled, "What shall a Boy do with his Vacation?" thoroughly covers the ground. A copy may be obtained for the asking by applying to Mr. J. D. McDonald, District Passenger Agent, Union Station, Toronto, Ont.

"My wife made an engagement for me at the Bingses. I forgot, and went fishing." "Catch anything?" "Not until I got home."

Minard's Liniment used by Physicians.

A certain judge, while passing through the scene of an election riot, had a large stone thrown at his head, but as he happened to be in a stooping posture at the time it passed over him. "You see," said he, addressing his friends afterwards, "that had I been an upright judge I might have been killed."

A Boon for the Bilious.—The liver is a very sensitive organ and easily deranged. When this occurs there is undue secretion of bile and the acid liquid flows into the stomach and sours it. It is a most distressing ailment, and many are prone to it. In this condition a man finds the best remedy in Parmelee's Vegetable Pills, which are warranted to speedily correct the disorder. There is no better medicine in the entire list of pill preparations.
